INTRODUCTION.

THE importance of the FASTI ECCLESIÆ ANGLICANÆ will not, it is presumed, be denied in the present day, when so many volumes illustrative of history and biography are constantly issuing from the press.

If any proof of the high estimation of the work were required, it is furnished by the fact of there being known to be extant at least twenty copies fully annotated by eminent men[1].

Many of these copies are apparently designed for new editions, but none has yet been given to the world.

Such a work manifestly requires continuation from time to time, and the compiler took some steps towards it[2]; but he did not effect his purpose, probably,

[1] In the Bodleian Library are to be found one by Dr. Rawlinson, others by Cole, Masters, Lussan, Brooke, Dr. Tanner, the Rev. J. Gutch, Registrar of Oxford, the Rev. Robert Smyth, of Woodstow, and one by an unknown hand. There are others in the British Museum, and at Cambridge, besides that by Bishop White Kennett in the library of Sir Thomas Phillipps, bart., and that belonging to Earl Powis. This, perhaps, is the most fitting place for the Editor to offer his public thanks to Earl Powis and Sir Thomas Phillipps for their great kindness and liberality in lending him these most valuable copies, with permission to make all the use of them he might think proper.

[2] "If ever there should be occasion to print a second edition of this work," he says, "let Fuller's Worthies and the Athenæ Oxonienses be revised; which will furnish the birthplaces and an account of the as stated by Browne Willis, on account of the little encouragement he received when he published his volume. Browne Willis himself was one of the first who collected materials for the purpose, but they afterwards appeared in a different form[3]. Since his time various attempts have been made to produce a second edition, but without result[4], owing, perhaps, to the great labour attendant on such an undertaking, the expense of printing and publishing it, and the limited sale to be expected of such a work.

The present edition was undertaken under the folseveral other preferments (not dignities) which many of the persons herein named enjoyed; which may conveniently be added. The said works will likewise furnish very many materials towards an Obituary of several eminent personages who lie buried dispersedly, and which, being duly placed under their respective years, may very properly be placed after the monumental inscriptions of each year, and help much towards a catalogue of the viri illustres of each age."—Jo. Le Neve, April 28th, 1716.

[4] About five and twenty years since, a Prospectus was issued by the Rev. William Richardson, M.A., of St. John's college, Cambridge, for a new edition of the Fasti Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ, in two volumes folio; but the work was not proceeded with, for the want of a sufficient number of subscribers to defray the expenses. The late Earl Powis, having purchased an interleaved copy filled with annotations and additions by several persons, liberally offered its use to the members of the Roxburgh Club; but it was not a popular measure with the club, and the design was abandoned. Nichols, in his Literary Anecdotes, states that the Rev. J. Gutch "was only deterred from undertaking a new edition by its extreme labour, and from the fortunate circumstance of his obtaining the easier and more profitable employment of Registrary of his University; and afterwards the Rev. Charles Coates would have brought out a new edition, provided the University of Cambridge would have printed it."

lowing circumstances. For many years the Editor has been in the habit of making such additions to his copy of the FASTI as came under his notice merely for his own use; but meeting with a remark of the Rev. Dr. Maitland, in his proposal for establishing "a church history publishing society," that a new edition of Le Neve was much required, and that it would be a fit work for such a society to undertake, the Editor put his notes in order, for the purpose of offering them to that society, if it ever should be formed. Unfortunately, however, for that department in literature, a sufficient number of spirited wellwishers to such a society was not to be found, and Dr. Maitland's proposition fell to the ground. Speaking afterwards on the subject of a new edition of the "FASTI" to several publishers, they all admitted the want of such a work, but were afraid to run the risk of its publication, under the apprehension that it would take many years to dispose of an edition large enough to cover the expenses attendant on its production. One gentleman among them however suggested, that a new edition would be a proper work to be brought out by the Delegates of the Press of the University of Oxford; accordingly he put the Editor in communication with one of the Delegates, who brought the project before his fellows, and this ended in their agreeing to undertake the work.

It is necessary to say a few words upon the materials used in the present edition.

From the mission of Augustine A.D. 597 to the commencement of the reign of John in 1199 the Editor has taken Le Neve as his basis, but instead of resting upon the authorities he cites, such as Battely's edition of Somner's Antiquities of Canterbury, Godwin De Præsulibus Angliæ, Wharton's Anglia Sacra, Fuller's Church History, Isaackson's Chronology, Weever's Funeral Monuments, (authors to whom every student is indebted, and who ought never to be mentioned without respect,) he preferred consulting the original authorities to which they themselves had referred. He wishes it, however, distinctly to be understood, that he has not seen many of the documents to which Le Neve and those authors have referred, arising either from their faulty citation, or from the MSS. not being now accessible; in all such cases, however, he has deemed it advisable to cite their authorities, in case any person should be fortunate enough to procure access to them.

From the year 1199 (the period at which the Chancery records commence, in which all the ecclesiastical appointments, over which the crown exercises any right or control, are registered) to 1715, where Le Neve's compilation terminates, the Editor, as in the earlier portions, has taken Le Neve's lists as the basis of the present edition; and for that period down to the present time he has searched the Patent, Charter, and Close Rolls, at the Tower and Rolls Chapel, the Registers of the Archbishops of Canterbury, the Registers of such of the Dioceses and Collegiate Churches, as he has been able to obtain access to; the Church Books in the Home Office, the Records denominated Bishops' Certificates at Carlton Ride and Queen Anne's Bounty Office, the MSS. in the British Museum, and such printed books as Godwin, Wharton, Browne Willis, Somner, the London Gazettes, the Historical Registers, Gentleman's Magazine, and various County Histories. In addition to which, he has been favoured with the loan of Bishop White Kennett's invaluable interleaved copy belonging to Sir Thomas Phillipps, bart., and another equally valuable, and, if possible, more fully annotated, copy belonging to Earl Powis; he has also had access to the copies deposited in the Bodleian, the British Museum, and other public libraries.

He has added a few preliminary remarks on the ancient and present extent of each Diocese, and likewise a List of the Canons of the Collegiate Church of Southwell, prepared expressly for this edition by the Rev. J. F. Dimock, one of the canons of that Church.

It would be in the highest degree presumptuous to claim the merit of perfect accuracy for a work of this description, in which every line contains either a date or a fact, many of which are variously given by different authors and documents: such perfection is wholly unattainable, at least a perfect work of this description has never yet issued from the press. Had not the extent of these volumes[5] rendered it impossible to keep the whole of them in type at the same time, several errors, discovered by that close comparison of the different dioceses which is only practicable in a printed form, would have been rectified before the sheets were worked off. Others, it is feared, still remain for correction by local antiquaries; for when an individual directs the whole of his inquiries to one given subject, he must necessarily acquire more information on that subject than he who has to treat of several.

[5] The reader may form some idea of the additions which have been made to Le Neve's portion of the work, by the fact that his volume contains only 11,051 entries, while this edition has more than 30,000, and that upward of six thousand Rolls and other records have been consulted, besides printed books.

Those who have been engaged in similar undertakings scarcely need to be reminded of the labour and difficulties attendant on the execution of a work, the contents of which extend over a period of more than eleven hundred years, and they will be the most inclined to make allowance for any errors and deficiencies which may be found in it. Several causes may be truly assigned for these, but particularly, I., the vague or conflicting statements to be met with in our ancient historians; II. the scantiness of ecclesiastical records, owing to their destruction at the period of the Reformation and during the civil wars; III. the difficulty of obtaining access to such as remain; IV. the variation in the chronology employed by the monkish historians, and the public records. The first commencing the year at different periods, and making their calculations either from the nativity of Christ, from the 1st of January or from the 25th of March, while in the public records the dominical calculation is disregarded, and the regnal one only adopted; and moreover during the greater portion of the Saxon era there is an additional difficulty arising from the variation of two years between the dates of events as given by the northern and southern chroniclers, the consequence of which is that the same events are assigned to different years by different authorities.

The Editor has had many doubts and some difficulty relative to the orthography of names, for in no two records are they spelt alike[6], and even in the same document variations occur. Foreign names and titles are thus especially puzzling; he has attempted however to preserve uniformity, though he has not always been able to do so, and sometimes to identify parties[7]. In some few cases he has departed from the usual mode of spelling names, but in such instances he has chiefly proceeded upon a principle and not from mere caprice—and yet he must admit that instances have occurred in which he has not been able to carry out the principle which he had laid down for his own guidance.

The Index, now for the first time furnished to the work, will, it is hoped, be found useful. As it has been prepared solely for the purpose of affording the means of ready reference to any desired name, no attempt has been made to identify any of the persons; for although in very many cases this could be satisfactorily done, in others an uncertainty prevails, which, as it proceeds from the deficiency or inaccuracy of the original documents, there appears no means of removing. Under these circumstances it has appeared advisable not to attempt what could not be satisfactorily and completely accomplished. For the Index, as also for much useful assistance throughout the progress of the work, the Editor is indebted to Mr. W. E. Flaherty.

The most pleasing part of the Editor's work remains to be performed, that of offering his warmest thanks to those noblemen and gentlemen who have most kindly aided him in preparing the ensuing pages for the press. As regards the diocese of Canterbury, he has to make his grateful acknowledgments to his Grace the Archbishop, lord Charles Thynne, and Mr. Foss. In the diocese of Bangor, to the very Rev. the Dean of Bangor. In the diocese of Exeter, to the Rev. Dr. Oliver and Mr. Pitman Jones. In the diocese of Hereford, to the Rev. John Webb, Rector of Tretire. In the diocese of Lichfield, to Mr. William Salt of Russell Square, and the Rev. Robert W. Eyton, Rector of Ryton, Salop. In the diocese of Lincoln, to Mr. John Ross and the Rev. John Hodgson, of St. Peter's, Thanet. In the diocese of London, to the Ven. Archdeacon Hale and Mr. Dyke. In the diocese of Norwich, to the lord Bishop of Norwich and Mr. John Kitson. In the diocese of Oxford, to the Ven. Archdeacon Clerke, and the Rev. Dr. Bliss, Principal of St. Mary Hall. In the diocese of St. David's, to the lord Bishop of St. David's. In the diocese of Carlisle, to Mr. G. G. Mounsey. In the diocese of Durham, to the Rev. Joseph Stevenson. For the portion relating to Westminster, to the Rev. John Jennings, and Mr. ex-Sheriff Evans. For Windsor, to the Hon. and Rev. H. C. Cust, Canon of Windsor. For Eton, to the Rev. John Eyre Yong. For Southwell to the Rev. J. F. Dimock, Minor Canon of Southwell. For the portion relating to the University of Oxford, he has especially to refer to the Rev. Dr. Bliss, Principal of St. Mary Hall; the Rev. Dr. Cardwell, Principal of St. Alban Hall; the Rev. Dr. Bandinel, Principal Librarian of the Bodleian; and the Rev. H. O. Coxe, one of the Librarians of the Bodleian. For the University of Cambridge, he has to refer to the Rev. Dr. Ainslie, Master of Pembroke College; the Rev. Dr. Cookson, Master of Peter-house; but more especially to the Rev. Joseph Romilly, Registrary of that University. He has also to mention particularly the Right Hon. the Earl Powis, Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart.; Garter King of Arms, (Sir Charles G. Young); Somerset Herald, (Mr. Courthope); the late Deputy Keeper of the MSS. in the British Museum, (Mr. John Holmes); the Grenville Librarian, (Mr. Edward Bond); Mr. Roberts, one of the Assistant Keepers of the Public Records; and Mr. John Bond. Mr. Christopher Hodgson; the Rev. Lambert Larking; the Rev. James Bliss, of Ogbourn St. Andrews; the Rev. John Bateson, Rector of White Roothing; the Rev. G. T. Driffield, Rector of Bow; the Rev. T. F. Fearne, of St. Giles-in-the-Fields; the Rev. C. H. Davis, of Nailsworth; and the Rev. William Williamson, of Thornton-le-Moor.

7 Dr. Monk (Life of Bentley, vol. ii. pp. 161, 162) gives a curious instance of the difficulty of all inquiry respecting identity in the case of the two Alexander Cunninghams, the one a critic, the other an historian, and this he says may serve as a caution to biographers and antiquaries, who are sometimes led by much slighter circumstances than those he has mentioned, to assign to one person the actions or writings of another.

LE NEVE.

IT frequently happens that few memorials are to be found of the lives of those who have been employed in perpetuating the memory of others. This is the case with the author of the following laborious compilation, whose name does not occur in any of our standard Biographical Dictionaries. The following are the only facts relating to him which have been discovered.

John Le Neve was born in Great Russell street, Bloomsbury, in the house facing Montague-house great gate, on St. John's day, 27th Dec. 1679, and baptized in the parish church of St. Giles-in-the-Fields on the 5th Jan. following. He was the only child of John Le Neve, and Amy[1] daughter of John Bent[2], of Paternoster row, mercer, citizen, and merchant-taylor of London. His father was a man of landed property, for, in addition to the manor of White Roothing in Essex[3], which he purchased about the year 1686,

[1] In the library of the late John Nichols, esq., was an annotated copy of the "Fasti Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ," which contained a note said to have been written by Le Neve himself, wherein the name of his mother is miswritten Mary. This circumstance, together with the style of the memorandum, seems opposed to the notion that it was drawn up by Le Neve himself; the entry being written in the third instead of the first person, and the dates of the several occurrences being given in general rather than specific terms.

[2] By Anne, daughter of John Newton, of Houghton.

[3] He held his first court there on the 8th of June 1686.

he held lands in Ashton in Northamptonshire, Lempster in Herefordshire, and Mark's hall in Essex.

Le Neve lost his mother in the eighth year of his age[4]; and about his twelfth was sent to Eton, and admitted into the lowermost remove of the third form[5]. After he had been there about two years his father died[6], leaving him under the guardianship of his kinsman, Mr. Peter Le Neve[7].

[4] She died 12th Dec. 1687, and was interred in the north aisle of Westminster Abbey, behind the organ, on the 17th of the same month. She was buried with twenty-four escutcheons, in which the arms of Le Neve are distinguished by the difference of a third son; and as her husband was the fourth son, this difference is probably not personal, but that of the branch of the family of Le Neve to which he belonged.

[5] He must have been an oppidan, and not on the foundation, i.e. one of the King's scholars; lists of whom, with certain particulars attached, are entered in the "Registrum Regale." The name of Le Neve does not there occur. Of the oppidans no such record is kept.

[6] He died on Sunday the 26th July 1693, and was buried on the 2nd of August, by the side of his wife Amy, in Westminster Abbey. His first wife, Frances, who died on the 12th May 1677, was also buried in the north aisle of the abbey. In his will, dated 17th May 1693, and proved the 8th of August following, he mentions his brothers-in-law Edward Browne and Edward Rigby, and their wives, as well as his aunt Lucy Molyneux. He also named his brother Edmund and his cousin Oliver Le Neve. He appointed his kinsman Peter Le Neve, esq., his executor, and guardian of his son.

[7] He was son and heir of Francis Neve, alias Le Neve, citizen and draper of London, and grandson of Firmian Neve, alias Le Neve, of Ringland in co. Norfolk. He was born 21st Jan. 1661–62, appointed Rouge Croix 17th Jan. 1688–89, afterwards Richmond Herald, and subsequently Norroy King of Arms. He held also the office of Deputy Chamberlain of the Exchequer. He had the honour of being the first President of the Society of Antiquaries, which office he held from 1717 to 1724. He died 24th Sept. 1729, ætat. 67.

Very contradictory opinions relative to his relationship to John Le Neve have obtained. They have been supposed to be brothers; and it has also been asserted that no connexion existed between them. It is quite clear, however, that there was blood relationship, though perhaps not very near; for John Le Neve, the father of the compiler of the "Fasti," calls Peter his kinsman, and appoints him executor of his will, and guardian of his only child. In MS. Harl. N°. 6098, is a letter from Richard Bowchier, dated from Chichester, 22nd March 1714, to John Le Neve, the compiler

Having arrived at the upper end of the fifth form, in the sixteenth year of his age, he left Eton and became a fellow-commoner of Trinity college, Cambridge[8], into which he was admitted in Sept. 1694, though he did not matriculate until 11th July 1696. He continued at Cambridge not quite three years, and left the university without taking any degree. Having removed to London, he there married[9] his first-cousin Frances, (second daughter of Thomas Boughton[10], of King's Cliff in Northamptonshire, and Elizabeth Le Neve[11], his father's only sister,) by whom he had issue eight children[12].

His first literary work seems to have been the "Fasti Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ;" but it does not appear at what period he commenced it, though it probably was after 1707, (the year in which Dr. White Kennett became dean of Peterborough,) for he says, "I had not proceeded far in my work before my good fortune outstripped my very hopes, by bringing me into the favour of a very reverend dean of this church, (Dr. White Kennett,) who at once laid open to my view an immense treasure in that way, the elaborate collection of the "Fasti," in which the writer says, "Remember me to y^r^ cosin, my friend Mr. P. Le Neve." The present Somerset Herald, (Mr. Courthope,) to whom the Editor is indebted for the pedigree printed at p. xii., is of opinion "that John Le Neve, of Cavendish, was descended from Robert Le Neve, of Ringland co. Norfolk, great-grandfather of Peter Le Neve, Norroy; so that if the father of the compiler of the 'Fasti' was not (as I suppose he was) second-cousin of Peter Le Neve, Norroy, he was not further removed than third-cousin."

[8] He seems to have retained a grateful recollection of his sojourn there; for he says, under Trinity college, Cambridge, "It will, during life, be the utmost satisfaction to me, to remember that I once had the honour to style myself a happy (though unworthy) fellow-commoner of this society."

[9] The date and place of his marriage have not been discovered.

[10] He died 2nd June 1688. His will, dated 26th June 1687, was proved 1st Feb. 1688–89.

[11] She was living, a widow, in 1693; having had five sons and three daughters by her husband. She had an estate for life in the manor of Old Paris Garden, in Christchurch, Surrey.

[12] Their names were John, Amy, Elizabeth, Richard, Peter, Elizabeth, Frances, Catherine. (MS. note in Mr. Nichols's copy of the "Fasti." Lit. Anecd. 1. p. 128.)

of more years than I have yet lived, and who (on my first request) most generously gave me free leave to extract whatever I pleased for the public service." He advertised the work as being in a state of preparation on the 11th June 1714[12], and received the first "proof" sheet from Mr. Nutt, the printer, on the 24th of Feb. 1714–15, but as some alteration "in the method" was recommended by the printer, it was not worked off until the 2nd of March following. Between that date and the ensuing 26th of January the whole work was printed, and ready for publication.

Le Neve did not in the first instance contemplate nearly so extensive a work as that he afterwards accomplished: he intended merely to give a list of the English prelates from the Revolution to his own time; but this design not meeting with the approbation of those members of the bench of bishops to whom he communicated it, he was induced at their recommendation to attempt what he calls a more difficult task, and commence his work at the year 1616, the period at which bishop Godwin terminated his labours; but upon Dr. White Kennett's liberal offer of the loan of his collections, he determined "to add the succession of deans and other principal dignitaries in each cathedral." He also extended his lists up to the re-establishment of Christianity in England after the arrival of Augustine. This probably gave rise to Browne Willis's statement, "that though Mr. John Le Neve has the name and credit of the 'Fasti Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ,' yet the real compiler of that useful work was bishop Kennett;" which may be taken in some measure as true, for upon comparing the "Fasti" with White Kennett's collections, it is evident that Le Neve did little more than publish a different arrangement of those materials. Indeed, he makes no secret of the matter: in his dedication to the bishop of Ely he writes, "Your lordship is not unacquainted with the several steps that have been taken in the prosecution of it, nor of the several materials which have been by many hands so generously communicated to me; and as to my own part of the work, I assure your lordship I aim at no higher a character than that of a faithful transcriber." He afterwards speaks of himself as being "the channel through which those most valuable collections are laid open to the public;" and that he has used his "utmost endeavour to do justice to those valuable collections of which he has had the advantage."

No one can read his dedication, preface, and notes, without at once admitting that he did not desire to take the credit of other men's labours; for he is profuse in his acknowledgments of the assistance he had received from many quarters, especially from bishop Kennett; it therefore seems hard that he should be deprived, as he has been by Cole, Hearne, and others, of all the credit which may be due for the compilation of the "Fasti."

Although Le Neve met with considerable assistance in the production of the "Fasti," yet he also speaks of several difficulties and discouragements, particularly "a maliciously contrived imprisonment, purposely intended to ruin both the author and the design." It seems strange that so apparently harmless an undertaking should have created enemies to a pious and laborious man; and it is to be regretted that no elucidation of the circumstances of the case can be offered[13].

That he received considerable literary assistance cannot be doubted, but it is sad to reflect that he met with so little encouragement from the public. He gives a list of the subscribers to his work, amounting to only forty-five, (out of which number twenty-seven were on the bench of bishops,) although seven hundred and fifty copies were printed. Browne Willis also states, that Le Neve declined to publish even a supplement to his work, "alleging that he could not meet with the least encouragement[14]."

[13] On the Common Pleas Roll (Hil. 7° Ann. rot. 1567) is entered a trial, in which he was plaintiff, relative to lands in Ashton, Roade, and Hartwell, in Northamptonshire; but there is nothing there to lead to the inference that the suit ended with his imprisonment, unless, indeed, he was arrested for the payment of the costs in the action.

[14] Although he declined publishing a supplement to the "Fasti," yet he made collections for one. Browne Willis sent him several additions

An increasing family and the expenses consequent thereon, the want of stipendiary occupation, and the failure of his publication of the "Fasti," seem to have involved him in pecuniary embarrassments which compelled him to sell the manor of White Roothing, the principal part of his paternal inheritance[15]. Notwithstanding his want of success with the "Fasti," he published in 1716 the "Life of Dr. Field, Dean of Gloucester[16];" and in 1717 a single volume, "intended as a specimen of a much larger work," of his "Monumenta," and containing epitaphs of persons then recently deceased, (from 1700 to 1715.) This was followed in 1718 by two more volumes, which embraced the period from 1650 to 1699[17]. In 1719 he brought out two other volumes, designed as supplementary, and extending the series from 1600 to 1718[18]. He speaks, in his preface to these last, of having made collections and corrections; he also promised to procure him information from bishop Tanner and others. Willis writes, "I count these will be of admirable use to you. I might possibly pick up more: but let me know how your design advances of your supplement." The Lansdown MS. 1038. f. 88. contains a letter from Le Neve to bishop Kennett, dated 18th Aug. 1719, wherein he says, "This waits on your lordship to beg the use of your lordship's MS. 'Fasti,' in 2 vols., during your stay in the country. I do assure your lordship they shall be carefully kept in my own possession, and immediately returned on your arrival in town. If your lordship please to favour me with a line, by way of order, I beg it may be directed to my house in Theobald's row, near Red Lyon street, Holbourn."

[15] He sold it, in 1717, to Robert Sumner, esq.

[16] Lond. 8vo. 1716. The Life was written by Nathaniel Field, and Le Neve seems only to have furnished the Preface to it.

[17] This book was put to press 22nd Oct. 1717. (MS. Harl. 6418.) He advertised that it would be ready by the 1st of November; that no more copies would be printed than were subscribed for, on the same terms as the first, viz. 5*s*. the small paper, and 8*s*. the large; half to be paid on subscribing, the other half on delivery. Subscriptions taken in till 1st Nov. and no longer. (MS. Addl. 5875.)

[18] "I received the first proof of this vol. on Saturday, 21st Feb. 1718–19. J. L." (MS. Harl. 6406.) He began this collection 20th March 1715–16. (MS. Harl. 6408.) MS. Harl. 5321 is a paper book, having at the beginning "Collections of Monumental Inscriptions, beginning with the year 1600 and ending with 1649, not yet printed by me, Jo. Le Neve. Apr. 21. 1715."

of the same kind as high as the year 1401[19], and solicits the favour of communications, of additions or corrections; but he did not publish any thing further on the subject, although he mentions that his manuscript collections were at least twice as great as what he had printed[20]. His next work was the "Lives of the Protestant Bishops;" of which he published in the year 1720 two parts, containing the archbishops of Canterbury and York.

These later publications appear to have been as unprofitable as his first work, and to have plunged him into further pecuniary difficulties, which compelled him to turn his university education to some useful account; accordingly he entered the church in the forty-fourth year of his age, without having taken any degree at either of the universities. He was presented to the rectory of Thornton-le-Moor, in Lincolnshire[21], by the bishop of Ely, to whom he had dedicated his "Fasti Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ," and was instituted thereto on the 2nd Jan. 1721–22[22]. This addition to his means, though evidently intended to afford him some relief from his troubles, had the contrary effect; for immediately it became known to his creditors, they arrested him, and threw him into Lincoln jail[23].

[19] Among the Harleian MSS. (3605–3616.) are twelve volumes of Monumental Inscriptions, from 1400 to 1716, in high preservation.

[20] In the Harleian collection of MSS. are several volumes collected by him.

[21] Browne Willis, in a letter to bishop Kennett, dated 13th Nov. 1721, writes, "I am glad Mr. Le Neve has got any preferment. I wish it was better; and should be glad to know the place where he is placed."

[22] "Secundo die ejusdem mensis (Januarii 1721–2) Johannes Le Neve clericus institutus fuit ad Rectoriam de Thornton le Moore com. Lincoln. dec: Walscroft ad præsentationem domini Gulielmi Eliensis Episcopi ratione Episcopatus sui pleno jure." (Bp. Certif. Lincoln.)

[23] This circumstance appears in a letter from Browne Willis to the bishop of Peterborough, dated 3rd Dec. 1722. "I am sorry," says Willis, "for poor Mr. Le Neve's misfortunes and confinement at Lincoln. I was in hopes his having a living would have made his creditors easy, and that they would have stayed till he was better provided to make them satisfaction." The docquet books of the Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, as well as the affidavits of debts from 1720 to 1735, have been searched for

No other event in the life of Le Neve has been discovered. The remainder of his days were probably spent in the performance of his parochial duties; at least, there is no proof of his having devoted any further portion of his time to the service of literature. His death, in all likelihood, took place in 1741, in the sixty-third year of his age, at his rectory house, but there is no direct evidence of the fact[24], as none of the registers of the parish are extant before 1783, the previous ones having been, it is supposed, destroyed by fire. If he died at Thornton-le-Moor, he would, as rector of the parish, have been buried in the chancel, which is now boarded over, so that any gravestone which may be there is concealed from view[25].

His successor at Thornton-le-Moor was instituted on the 25th May 1741.

a judgment against him, but none has been found; nor is there any record remaining of the prisoners in Lincoln jail at that time.

[24] "May 25th 1741. Thomas Booth, clerk, B. A., was instituted to the rectory of Thornton in le Moor in Lincolnshire and deanry of Walshcroft, vacant by the death of John Le Neve, the last incumbent, at the presentation of the Right Reverend Robert Lord Bishop of Ely, in full right by virtue of his bishopric." (Bp. Certif. Lincoln.)

[25] The only memorials of him at Thornton-le-Moor, are, the silver communion cup, still in use, on which is engraven "John Le Neve," without any date or other inscription; and an old parish book, in which the name of John Le Neve appears as rector of the parish and chairman of the parish meetings between the years 1726 and 1739, both inclusive.

WILLIAM,

(BY DIVINE PERMISSION)

LORD BISHOP OF ELY.

My Lord,

I most humbly hope your lordship will not expect an elaborate apology for my presuming to lay the following sheets at your lordship's feet, since the underwritten reason (as well as many others) seems naturally to require that duty from me.

When (some few years ago) I waited on your lordship with a rude sketch of a design I had then in view, your lordship was pleased not only to point out to me the inconveniencies, as well as needlessness, of pursuing such a work, but also to mark out and encourage me to undertake what is hereby most humbly submitted to your lordship's censure. For whose patronage can this work so justly claim as your lordship's, who so properly may be reckoned the father of it?

Your lordship is not unacquainted with the several steps that have been taken in the prosecution of it, nor of the several materials which have been by many hands so generously communicated to me; and as to my own part of the work, I assure your lordship I aim at no higher a character than that of a faithful transcriber.

If it shall happen to have the good fortune to please a judgment so nice as your lordship's, I shall reckon it sufficient amends for all the difficulties and discouragements which have been so industriously thrown in my way, particularly by some people who have done their utmost endeavour to ruin me and the design.

That it may please God long to continue your lordship so eminent an example of all Christian virtues, is the hearty prayer of,

My lord,

Your lordship's most obliged,

Most obedient,

and most humble servant,

Jan. 26, 1715–16. JOHN LE NEVE.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

IN as few words as possible, I beg leave to inform my readers, that some few years ago, having more leisure time than I was willing to spend in idleness, I formed a scheme of a work, partly of the like nature as what I now present to their view, but not at that time intended half so voluminous, as not designing to have begun higher than from the date of the late glorious Revolution.

When (some time after) I waited on some of the right reverend lords the bishops, to inform them of my design, their lordships were pleased to give their opinion, that I should lay aside that work as altogether needless, the alterations therein to be expressed being so recent in every one's memory, and with several other reasons, prevailed with me not only so to do, but likewise to attempt a task which at that time appeared much more difficult to me.

One reason which their lordships were pleased to encourage me with was, the consideration that the succession of the prelates of this kingdom, so excellently done by the right reverend Francis Godwin, late lord bishop of Llandaff and Hereford, had not been deduced lower than the year 1616, or thereabouts, (except in a little book[1], which mentions only the plain names and dates of the year;) and afterwards, on a further consideration, that the said account by bishop Godwin was become scarce, and no declared intention of reprinting it, their lordships excited me to make a short extract of the dates therein given, and to compare them with what other accounts I could procure. And for my greater encouragement, their lordships were pleased to promise to revise and correct my account of each cathedral in MS. with their own notes, that the work might be rendered as complete as possible.

On these encouragements I resolved to obey their lordships' commands, and accordingly set myself to work; and had not gone far before my good fortune outstripped my very hopes, by bringing me into the favour of a very reverend dean of this Church[2], who at once laid open to my view an immense treasure in that way, the elaborate collection of more years than I have yet lived, and who (on my first request) most generously gave me free leave to extract whatever I pleased for the public service.

I now found myself so strongly qualified for such an undertaking, that I thought it might not be unacceptable to the public to add the succession of the deans, and other principal dignitaries in each cathedral.

In the prosecution of the work, I have likewise met with very great assistance from several other persons, my obligations to whom I have endeavoured to acknowledge in their proper places; and therefore shall only beg leave once for all to observe, that when so vast a treasure has been amassed together by the curious observation of so nice a searcher into the almost obliterated monuments of antiquity, I hope my readers will give me leave (without imputation of flattery) on all occasions humbly to express my gratitude for being so fortunate as to prove the channel, through which those most valuable collections are laid open to the public use, and, I hope, (I use the words of a learned prelate,) to the national service.

As to my own part or share in this work, I hope I can satisfy my conscience, that I have used my utmost endeavour to do justice to those valuable collections of which I have had the advantage; and if those gentlemen who have so generously assisted me will but believe so, and at the same time pardon the weakness of my part of the performance, I shall willingly submit it on those conditions to the judgment of every candid reader; only begging him wherever he sees a fault, which his exactness (perhaps) may not be inclinable otherwise to pardon, to remember the sentence, "Si quid novisti rectius istis, Candidus imperti."

A fault that may be imputed as to the different ways of spelling the same name in divers places of the book, I beg to excuse thus: (viz.) that the same person's name is often variously spelt in several records of equal and undoubted authority; for instance, Gynewell, bishop of Lincoln, Reg. ipsius: Gyndwelle among the fines of Lincolnshire in the Tally-court, Westminster. Rowlands, bishop of Bangor, in the congé d'élire: Roland in the grant of the royal assent: Roulande in the grant of restitution of the temporalities. Cotton, bishop of Exeter, Reg. ipsius: Colon in the grant of the royal assent: Coton in the grant of restitution of the temporalities. And so of several others.

I am likewise obliged to own, that I have not performed every article promised in my proposals, for that the prebendaries of Rochester, Worcester, Chester, and Durham, are not specified, I hope the reader will believe I have done my utmost endeavour to obtain them: but not having been as yet so happy as to succeed in my solicitations, I can do no more than beg pardon for those or any other deficiencies.

The honour that this book has already obtained of being subscribed for by so many of my lords the bishops, (of which class, twenty-seven now living, and three dead since,) can be imputed to no other reason than that by which their lordships govern all their actions, (viz.) the encouraging any good design meant for the public use and service.

It would be the utmost vanity in me to say, their lordships are not balked in the performance; but I comfort myself with the assurance, that as their lordships had goodness enough to encourage it at first, so they have charity enough to accept it with all its faults, and to make a large allowance, as well for the incapacity of the undertaker, as for the many difficulties and discouragements he has met with in prosecuting the undertaking, amongst which a maliciously contrived imprisonment, purposely intended to ruin both the author and the design, may be reckoned none of the least.

Notwithstanding which, it has pleased God to support me so far as to finish it; and as to the consequence or reception, I cheerfully submit it to the same overruling Providence.

And that my learned readers may form their notions of the pains and time the making these collections must have cost, I shall here present them with a taste of a "supellex libraria ad sedem Cantuariensem tantum." And if lists of the same kind can be produced relating to each other see, it may at least prove that the first collector or collectors thought no trouble too much to make it as complete, as the materials that had hitherto escaped the rust of time, or devouring fire and sword, would possibly allow.

But the foregoing List being of Manuscripts (and only relating to one see), let the reader be pleased to make a list of the printed books likewise quoted throughout this work, and perhaps it may deter any ill-natured critic from attempting to mark all the faults contained in it.

I think myself obliged in justice to my printer to assure the reader, that the utmost care has been taken to be exact in the figures: and though some few faults have escaped; yet, I hope, considering the bulk of the volume, and the variety of dates therein contained, that the errata will be pardonable.

I have nothing further to add, but that if this my first attempt shall have the good fortune to meet with a kind reception, I shall endeavour to make a collection of all the monumental inscriptions (ancient and modern) in each of the several cathedrals, collegiate churches or chapels, herein mentioned; and shall publish them all together in one volume.

I have already made some large collections towards that design, and shall pursue it, if I meet with encouragement: in the meantime I shall be very much obliged to any gentleman that shall please to communicate any materials of that nature; and I humbly hope, upon any alteration amongst the present dignitaries of the several cathedrals, &c., that some gentleman of that church or college will be pleased to inform me of it by letter, that I may have the satisfaction of continuing the succession in a regular manner during my life.

Any letters directed for me, to be left either at Mr. Charles King's shop in Westminster-hall, or at Mr. Henry Clements's in St. Paul's Church-yard, will (God willing) come very safe to my hands, and the favour shall thankfully be acknowledged by

Your most obedient humble servant,

Jan. 26, 1715–16. JOHN LE NEVE.

CANTERBURY.

THE diocese of Canterbury contained, up to 1st Jan. 1846, three-fourths of the county of Kent[1], besides about one hundred peculiars[2] in other dioceses. Up to that time there was only one archdeaconry, that of Canterbury; but by an order in council, gazetted 4th June 1841, there was founded a new archdeaconry, called and styled "the archdeaconry of Maidstone," consisting of the deaneries of Sittingbourne, Charing, and Sutton; and the right of collating the archdeacon of Maidstone was vested in the archbishop of Canterbury and his successors for ever; and the canonry, or

[1] By an order in council, gazetted 20th Aug. 1845, founded on stat. 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 77, the diocese of Canterbury is made to consist of the county of Kent, (except the city and deanery of Rochester, and the parishes proposed to be included in the diocese of London[a],) and of the parishes of Croydon and Addington, and the district of Lambeth palace, in the county of Surrey.

[2] By an order in council, gazetted 8th June 1841, the deanery of Southwell, and the several parishes or places therein comprised, and the several parishes of Kinolton, South Muskham, Apesthorpe, Bole, East Drayton with Askham, Laneham, Misterton, West Stockwith, and North Wheatley, in the county of Nottingham, possessing or claiming peculiar jurisdiction and to be exempt from the ordinary jurisdiction of the archbishop of York and archdeacon of Nottingham, are to be annexed to and included in the province of Canterbury, diocese of Lincoln, and archdeaconry of Nottingham, respectively; all the other peculiars are done away with, and annexed to the several dioceses of London, Chichester, Winchester, Rochester and Ely.

ninth prebend in the cathedral church of Canterbury, lately held by the rev. William Wood, was annexed and united to the said archdeaconry for ever.

The province of Canterbury includes twenty dioceses: viz. St. Asaph, Bangor, Bath and Wells, Bristol and Gloucester[3], Chichester, St. David's, Ely, Exeter, Hereford, Llandaff, Lichfield and Coventry, Lincoln, London, Norwich, Oxford, Peterborough, Rochester, Salisbury, Winchester, and Worcester.

ARCHBISHOPS.

598 Augustine was dispatched from Rome 596[4]; arrived in the isle of Thanet 597[5]; went to France, and was consecrated by the archbishop of Arles on Sunday 17th Nov. 597; returned to England 598; received his pall from Rome 601, settled his see at Canterbury in 602, and died 26th May 605[6], and was buried in St. Augustine's abbey, near the high altar, having previously (28th April 604[7]) ordained as his successor

605 Lawrence, who died on Friday 2nd Feb. 619[8], and was buried in the porch of St. Augustine's abbey.

619 Mellitus was translated, or rather ejected, from London; died Tuesday 24th April 624[9], and was buried in the porch of St. Augustine's abbey.

624 Justus was translated from Rochester[10]; died 10th Nov. 630[11], and was buried in the porch of St. Augustine's abbey.

631 Honorius, ordained by Paulinus archbishop of York; received his pall 634; died 30th Sept. 653[12], and was buried in the church of St. Augustine's abbey.

See vacant one year and six months[13].

655 Deusdedit or Adeodatus, called also Frithona, ordained 26th March[14]; died 14th July 664[15].

Uighard or Wirrard[16], elected, but died at Rome before consecration[17].

Hadrian, appointed by the Pope, but declined[18].

668 Theodore of Tarsus, ordained at Rome 26th March 668[19]; enthroned at Canterbury 27th May 669[20]; died [29th Sept.] 690[21].

693 Berhtuald[22], abbot of Reculver in Kent, elected 1st July 692; ordained by Godwine archbishop of Lyons 29th June 693; enthroned at Canterbury 31st Aug. in the same year[23], and died 13th Jan. 731[24].

731 Taetwine[25], a monk of Bredone in Worcestershire, was consecrated at Canterbury, 10th June, by the bishops of Winchester, London, Lichfield, and Rochester[26]; he died 30th July 734[27].

735 Nothelm[28] was consecrated in 735[29], and received his pall 736[30]; died 17th Oct. 741[31].

741 Cuthbert[32], translated from Hereford; died 26th Oct.

church of St. Mary which he had chiefly built at vast expense[92].

1052 STIGAND, bishop of Winton, invaded the archbishopric[93]. Some MSS. of the Saxon Chronicle however state that the King conferred it on him: "Rex autem dedit Stigando capellano suo archiepiscopatum Kantiæ;" be that as it may, he could not obtain the pall from Stephen IX, and therefore prudently retained the bishopric of Winchester. By bribery he obtained a pall from Benedict X in 1058; but that Pope being dethroned by Nicholas II, Stigand was not recognised as archbishop. He retained however both sees until the council of Winchester, held in the octave of Easter 1070, when he was degraded and condemned to perpetual imprisonment[94].

1174 RICHARD, prior of Dover, was elected 3rd June (iii Non. Ralph de Neville, bishop of Chichester, and the King's chancellor, was chosen by the monks, and the royal assent given to his election 24th Sept. 1231[66]. That prelate however refused the primacy, and the monks appealed to Rome; but the King having written to the Pope by the advice of his chancellor, complaining that the monks had elected an archbishop without obtaining the royal license, and praying the Pope to annul such election, the holy see acceded to the King's request[67] and set aside the election[68]. The King in the meanwhile issued his congé d'élire dated 7th March 1232[69], and

John, the sub-prior of Canterbury, was chosen, and the royal assent was given to his election 22nd May 1232[70]; but the Pope annulled the election[71], and the King issued a second congé d'élire 2nd Aug.[72], and

He was at length confirmed 4th Sept. 1294, and his confirmation having been solemnly published on the 7th, his consecration took place at Rome on the 12th of the same month. On 5th Oct. he left Rome, and arrived in England at the latter end of January 1295, and proceeded at once to do fealty to the King, who was then in Wales; this done, his temporalities were restored to him 5th Feb.[9] He arrived at Canterbury 18th March, but was not enthroned until 2nd Oct.[10] He died at Oxford 11th May 1313[11], and was buried on the 23rd of the same month in his own cathedral[12]. Thomas Cobham, S. T. P., precentor of York, was, according to the Canterbury registers, elected 28th May 1313, he being then at Paris, where he received notification of his election 6th June. Having consented to undertake the office, he was presented 9th June to the King, then also in Paris, but his majesty deferred his answer to the 24th, when Cobham once more presented himself before him at Pontois, but he again postponed his decision until his return to England. Upon this Cobham proceeded direct to the court of Rome at Avignon, but he there learned that the Pope, by bull dated v Cal. Maii (27th April), nearly a month anterior to archbishop Winchelsey's death, had reserved to himself the next presentation to the see of Canterbury[15]; and accordingly

1314 7 Edw. II. Walter Reynolds, bishop of Worcester, was translated to this see by papal provision; the bull was dated Cal. Oct. (1st Oct.) 1313, and the King restored the temporalities to him 3rd Jan. 1314 following[16]. He received his pall 11th Feb. in the church of Chartham (sent by the hands of Walter de Maydestune, his successor in the see of Worcester), and was enthroned on the 18th of the same month[17]. Godwin however states that the bulls of his translation were published in Bow church 4th Jan. 1313[18], that he received his pall 17th Feb. and was installed with great pomp and solemnity 19th April in the presence of the King, the Queen, and many nobles. He died 16th Nov. 1327[19], and was buried in his own cathedral on the 27th of the same month[20]. The license for the election of an archbishop in his room was issued 30th Nov. 1327[21], and

He accepted the dignity at Chichester on the 21st of the same month, and was presented to the king on the 24th[23]; who gave his assent to the election at Lichfield 2nd Jan. 1328[24]. Having obtained the King's letters patent of safe conduct 6th Jan.[25], he sailed for the court of Rome on the 17th of that month, and obtained the Pope's confirmation 25th May following[26], was consecrated 5th June at Avignon in the church of the friars preachers, and received his pall on the 9th of the same month. On his return he landed at Dover 5th Sept.[27], received his temporalities from the King at Lynn on the 19th of the same month[28], and was enthroned 22nd Jan. 1329. The license to elect his successor was issued 28th Aug.[35], and 1348 22 Ed. III. JOHN DE UFFORD or OFFORD, dean of Lincoln and chancellor of England, was nominated by papal provision: the bull is dated viii Cal. Oct. (24th Sept.) 1348, and was published in the church of Canterbury 26th Nov. He, as elect of Canterbury, had a grant of the custody of the temporalities 27th Nov.[36] He obtained restitution of the temporalities from the king 14th Sept.[37], and died on the 7th of the following June[38], before he had received either pall or consecration: it is perhaps for these reasons that Godwin does not allow him a place in the succession; and on the same ground Stigand and Reginald Fitz-Joceline ought not to be reckoned in the catalogue. The prior and chapter of Christ Church, by letter dated 24th May 1349, inform the King of the death of John de Offord, their late archbishop, and pray for a license to elect another in his room[39]. 1349 3 Ed. III. SIMON ISLIP, archdeacon of Stow, canon of St. Paul's, and dean of the arches, was nominated by papal provision; bull dated at Avignon Non. Oct. (Oct. 7) 1349.[44] He had the custody of the temporalities 19th Oct.[45], and the temporalities were restored to him 15th Nov.[46]; the bull was published in the chapter-house at Canterbury 18th Dec., and he was consecrated on the 20th of the same month[47]. He died at Oteford vi Cal. Maii (26th April) 1366, and was buried in his own cathedral 2nd May[48]. Upon Simon Islip's death, the license to elect a successor was issued 30th April[49].

WILLIAM EDINGDON, bishop of Winchester, was nominated to this see 10th May 1366, but refused it[50].

1366 40 Ed. III. SIMON LANGHAM, bishop of Ely, was translated to this see by papal provision: the bull bears date 24th July 1366[51], and was published in the chapter Non. Nov. (5th Nov.), and the temporalities were restored to him on the same day[52]: he was solemnly enthroned 25th March 1367. lated to this see[55], the temporalities whereof were restored to him 15th Jan. 1369[56]. He was enthroned the Sunday before Midsummer[57]. He died on Monday, 5th June 1374, and was buried in his own cathedral[58]. The license to elect a successor to Wittlesey is dated 20th June 1374[59].

According to the Canterbury registers, Simon de Langham, a Roman cardinal, was elected 30th June 1374[60]. If this statement be correct, the archbishop-elect was doubtless the same individual who resigned the see in 1368 on being raised to the dignity of cardinal. Godwin however states that it was Adam Easton, a Roman cardinal, who was chosen on the death of archbishop Wittlesey; but whichever it might be, the election was nullified by the Pope in favour of

1375 SIMON SUDBURY, alias TYBOLD, bishop of London, who 49 Ed. III. was translated hither 4th May 1375[61], and received the temporalities 5th June following[62]. dated 5th Aug.[68], and the temporalities were delivered to him on the 23rd of the same month[69]. He died at Maidstone 31st July 1396[70], and was buried in his own cathedral by command of the King[71]. The license to elect a new archbishop after the decease of Courtenay is dated 3rd Aug.[72]; and

1397 Ric. II. Thomas Arundel, archbishop of York, was translated to the see by papal provision; the bull, dated vii Cal. Oct. (25th Sept.) 1396, was received at Lambeth 10th Jan. 1397, and published in the cathedral at Canterbury on the following day[73]. He received the temporalities 11th Jan. 1397[74], and also his cross on the same day, and was enthroned on the 19th of the same month[75]. In the second year of his translation he was attainted of high treason, and compelled to leave the kingdom, "ratione judicii versus ipsum in parliamento nostro apud Westminster die Lunæ proximo post festum Exaltacionis Sanctæ Crucis ultimo præteritum redditi[76]." Upon which the Pope appointed him bishop of St. Andrew's[77]; and in his stead his Holiness substituted

1398 Ric. II. Roger Walden, dean of York, who had the temporalities restored to him 21st Jan. 1398[78]; but king

1399 1 Hen. IV. Thomas Arundel 21st Oct. 1399[81]. He died, according to the Canterbury registers, 19th Feb. 1414, and was buried the next day in his own cathedral. The license to elect an archbishop on the death of Thomas Arundel is dated 27th Feb. 1414[82]. The custody of the temporalities was granted to John Wotton 27th Feb.[83]

1414 2 Hen. V. Henry Chicheley, bishop of St. David's, was demanded to this see 4th March 1414; the Pope nevertheless issued his bull of provision dated v Cal. Maii (27th April) 1414[84]. The royal assent to his election was given 23rd March[85], the temporalities were delivered to him 30th May 1414[86], and he received his pall 24th July following. He died 12th April 1443[87], and was buried in his own cathedral. The license to elect vice Henry Chicheley is dated the 27th April 1443[88].

1443 21 H. VI. John Stafford, bishop of Bath and Wells, was translated to this see by papal bull, dated 13th May 1443[89]. The royal assent was given to his translation 24th May[90], and he had the temporalities restored to him 25th June[91]; he was consecrated 23rd Aug., and enthroned 22nd Sept. following. He was appointed chancellor of England 1432[92]; and died 25th May 1452, and was buried in his own cathedral[93]. The congé

1633 Car. I. WILLIAM LAUD, bishop of London, was nominated by the King to this see 6th Aug. 1633; elected by the chapter on the 19th of the same month; and confirmed 19th Sept.[43]. He was accused of high treason by the house of commons 18th Dec. 1640, and committed to the Tower, where he was confined four years: at length, after a tedious trial in the house of lords, the judges unanimously acquitted him of high treason. He was, however, condemned to die, and was beheaded on Tower hill 10th Jan. 1644–5, and his body was buried in the church of Allhallows, Barking; but in July 1663 it was removed thence to St. John's college chapel, Oxford. Upon the Restoration, the see having been vacant about sixteen years, a congé d'élire was issued 3rd Sept. 1660; in pursuance of which,

1660 Car. II. WILLIAM JUXON, bishop of London, having been nominated to this see, was elected 13th Sept., and confirmed on the 20th of the same month[44]. He died at Lambeth palace 4th June 1663, aged 81 years, and was buried in St. John's college chapel, Oxford[45]. The congé d'élire on the death of archbishop Juxon issued 14th July 1663; and 1663 Car. II. GILBERT SHELDON, bishop of London, having been nominated to Canterbury, was elected 11th Aug. 1663, and confirmed in that see on the 31st of that month[46]. He died at Lambeth 9th Nov. 1677, and was buried in the church at Croydon in Surrey[47].

1678 Car. II. WILLIAM SANCROFT, S.T.P., dean of St. Paul's, London, was consecrated in Westminster abbey 27th Jan.

On 24th July 1621 while hunting in Bramzill park, which belonged to lord Edward Zouch of Haringworth, he accidentally shot Peter Hawkins the keeper, instead of the buck he aimed at, and 22nd Nov. 1621 he obtained the King's free pardon for the man's death. [50] Church Book, Home Office. As this is the first citation from these Records, it is necessary to describe their contents and nature. The Church Books commence in November 1688, and contain entries of all matters on ecclesiastical subjects in which the Crown is concerned: for instance, inter alia, on the avoidance of a see, either by death or translation, the Secretary of State for the Home Department prepares a warrant, addressed to the clerk of the privy signet, directing him to prepare a bill of privy signet for the congé d'élire. A copy of the privy signet bill under the sign manual, and of the letter missive addressed to the dean and chapter by which the Crown recommends a particular person for election also under the sign manual, are entered in these books: these documents are here called the nomination. The election having taken place, the dean and chapter send their certificate of the fact under their common seal; and the Secretary of State prepares a second warrant to the clerk of the privy signet to prepare a bill of the royal assent to the election. The bishop-elect having performed fealty and homage, a third warrant is issued by the Secretary of State to the clerk of the privy signet directing him to prepare a writ for the restitution of the temporalities. It should also be observed, that the dates of the congé d'élire, the royal assent, and the writ of restoration of the temporalities, bear the real date of the occurrence, while the documents themselves which pass the great seal bear the date of their delivery to the Chancellor; consequently they generally differ a few days in date, the documents in the Home Office bearing an earlier date than the document under the great seal. In some instances, however, the dates of the great seal document have been given for the events here mentioned.

assent on the 21st[51], was confirmed in the church of St. Mary-le-Bow in Cheapside, London, on the 28th, and consecrated there on the 31st of the same month[52]. The temporalities were restored to him 6th July following[53]. He died 22nd Nov. 1694, and was buried in the church of St. Lawrence Jewry, London[54].

1695 Will. III. THOMAS TENISON, bishop of Lincoln, was nominated by the King in council 6th Dec. 1694[55]; and having been elected, received the royal assent on the 31st of that month[56]; he was confirmed 16th Jan. 1694–5[57]; the temporalities were restored to him 18th Jan. 1694–5[58]; and he was enthroned 16th May following. He died at Lambeth 14th Dec. 1715, and was buried in the chancel of the parish church[59].

1716 Geo. I. WILLIAM WAKE, bishop of Lincoln, was nominated by the King 17th Dec. 1715, and was confirmed 16th Jan. 1715–6[60]. He died 24th Jan. 1736–7, in the 79th year of his age, and was buried at Croydon.

1737 Geo. II. JOHN POTTER, bishop of Oxford, was nominated by the King in council 9th Feb. 1736–7[61]; and having been elected archbishop of Canterbury in February, received the royal assent on the 19th of that month[62]: he was confirmed on the 28th of that month, and received the temporalities 7th March following[63]. He died 10th Oct. 1747, and was buried at Croydon.

The archbishopric is rated[87] for first fruits at the sum of 2682*l.* 12*s.* 2*d*[88].

The arms of the see are thus blazoned: Azure, an episcopal staff in pale argent, ensigned with a cross patie or, surmounted by a pall of the second edged and fringed of the third, charged with four crosses formée fitchée sable.

Upon the dissolution of the priory, king Henry the Eighth, by his letters patent, dated 8th April 1542, in the 33rd year of his reign, erected a new society, consisting of a dean and twelve canons, whom he incorporated into one body, and empowered to act as Dean and Chapter of the cathedral and metropolitical church of Christ in Canterbury; and in the next year he endowed the church by his charter, dated 26th May 1543.

DEANS.

Nicholas Wotton, LL.D., was constituted the first dean by the charter of incorporation. He was dean 25 years and 293 days; died at London 26th Jan. 1566–7, and was buried in the cathedral at Canterbury. He was also dean of York.

Thomas Godwin, S.T.P., was presented by the Queen; instituted 10th March 1566–7[89]; and in September 1584 was made bishop of Bath and Wells[90].

Richard Rogers, S.T.P., suffragan bishop of Dover, was instituted 6th Sept. 1584. He died 19th May 1597, ætat. 64, and was buried in the cathedral.

Thomas Nevil, S.T.P., dean of Peterborough, was instituted 28th June 1597. He died 2nd May 1615, and was buried in the cathedral[91].

Charles Fotherby, S.T.P., archdeacon of Canterbury, was instituted 12th May 1615[92]. He died 29th March 1619, ætat. 70, and was buried in the cathedral[93].

John Boys, S.T.P., was admitted 3rd May 1619[94]. He died on the 26th, and was buried 30th Sept. 1625 in the cathedral near his predecessor.

Isaac Bargrave, S.T.P., was nominated by letters patent dated 11th Oct., and admitted 16th Oct. 1625[95]. He was buried near his predecessor 25th Jan. 1642–3, ætat. 56[96].

George Aglionby, S.T.P., was constituted by the King 6th May 1643, but by reason of the confusion of those times was never installed. He died in the year following, and was buried in Christ Church, Oxford.

Thomas Turner, S.T.P., dean of Oxford, was constituted by the King 3rd Jan. 1643–4, but from the like cause did not enter on possession till 10th Aug. 1660. He died 8th Oct. 1672, ætat. 81, and was buried in the cathedral.

John Tillotson, S.T.P., was admitted 4th Nov. 1672[97]; and 19th Nov. 1689 was removed to the deanery of St. Paul's, London[98].

John Sharp, S.T.P., was nominated 23rd Sept. 1689[99], and admitted 21st Nov. following[1]; and in 1691 was consecrated archbishop of York[2].

George Stanhope, S.T.P., was instituted 18th and installed 23rd March 1703–4[7]. He died at Bath 18th March 1728.

Elias Sydall was nominated 30th March 1728[8], and elected 10th April following[9]. He was made bishop of St. David's, and afterwards translated to Gloucester; but he held the deanery of Canterbury in commendam till his death, 24th Dec. 1733.

John Lynch was constituted dean of Canterbury 11th Jan. 1733–4[10], and installed on the 18th of that month. He died 25th May 1760.

William Friend was nominated 3rd June 1760[11], and elected on the 12th of the same month, vice Dr. Lynch deceased[12]. He died 26th Nov. 1766.

John Potter was constituted dean of Canterbury 20th Dec. 1766, vice William Friend deceased[13]. He died 20th Sept. 1770.

Brownlow North was made dean of Canterbury in the room of John Potter 6th Oct. 1770[14]. He resigned on being made bishop of Lichfield.

John Moore succeeded Brownlow North 19th Sept. 1771[15]. He resigned in 1775.

James Cornwallis succeeded John Moore 28th April 1775[16]. He was promoted to the see of Lichfield in 1781.

George Horne was made dean of Canterbury, vice James Cornwallis, 19th Sept. 1781[17]. He was promoted to Norwich in 1790.

[1] An entry in a manuscript called the Black Book, belonging to the archdeaconry of Canterbury, has been received by archbishop Parker, Wharton and Somner, as the principal evidence of the origin of the archdeaconry of Canterbury. It states that, from the time of Augustine, the first archbishop of Canterbury, to that of Lanfranc, a period of four hundred and sixty-two years, there was no archdeacon in the city or diocese of Canterbury; but that, from the time of Theodore, the sixth primate, there was, in St. Martin's church, in the suburbs of Canterbury, a bishop who performed within that city and diocese, during the archbishop's absence, all episcopal offices; that the bishop of St. Martin's died during the archiepiscopate of Lanfranc, and that that primate would not ordain another bishop to the church, but transferred that portion of the jurisdiction which the bishop of St. Martin exercised within the city of Canterbury, to one of his clerks named Valerius, and who first obtained the title of archdeacon. This instrument seems to have been forged by the monks of St. Augustine's abbey about the year 1313 for the express purpose of taking from the archdeacon the power of exercising provincial and diocesan jurisdiction during the vacancy of the see, and in the hope of ending a contest which had disturbed their cloisters for more than seventy years. Batteley has with much acumen and learning exposed the forgery, and proved that the office of archdeacon of Canterbury did not arise out of the suppression of the office of bishop of St. Martin, but that it existed from the time of archbishop Theodore at least, who having been consecrated at Rome by pope Vitalianus in 668, came into England in the following year, and was, according to Beda, the first archbishop to whom the whole church of England did own subjection (cum omnis Anglorum ecclesia manus dare consentiret), and who, exercising the severest discipline over his clergy, would certainly have had his archdeacon, long before called the Eye of the Bishop, and whose office it was to remind and admonish the clergy to observe the decrees and canons of councils and synods. The reader feeling interested in this subject is referred to Batteley's "Discourse concerning the Archdeaconry and Archdeacons of Canterbury."

deacon of Canterbury is the entry in the Black Book mentioned in note (1); but as that instrument is undoubtedly spurious, his name ought properly to be removed from the list.

ANSCHIBILLUS subscribed to the decrees of a provincial council in 1075.

WILLIAM was archbishop Anselm's archdeacon, and three of that primate's letters[4] are addressed to him as such. He was also a witness to Anselm's charter[5], by which he gave the manor of Stisted to this church.

Batteley however corrects Somner's error.

Thomas Becket succeeded Roger in the archdeaconry of Canterbury. He was promoted to the primacy in 1162, but he retained the archdeaconry for some time after he had been advanced to the metropolitical chair, although the King had desired him to resign it. At length, at his majesty's earnest request, he resigned it in favour of Geoffrey Ridel[16]. He was employed by king Henry in his quarrel with Becket, and was consequently excommunicated by the archbishop[17]. He was promoted to the see of Ely in 1174.

Herbert succeeded Geoffrey Ridel, and was one of the three archdeacons whom archbishop Richard constituted; the other two were Savaricus and Nicholaus. But this arrangement did not continue long, for the archbishop abrogated his appointment and made a grant of the whole jurisdiction to Herbert[18] in the year 1180[19]. He was elected bishop of Salisbury in 1193.

Robert: his name follows that of Herbert in Somner's list, but there appears to be some misconception on the subject on his part.

Peter of Blois[20].

Henry of Castilion was archdeacon in 1199[21] and in 1200[22].

Adam Motrum had been constituted 28th July by archbishop Courtenay[59].

Richard Clifford was constituted archdeacon in March 1397, and was promoted to the see of Bath and Wells in 1401, but removed to Worcester before consecration.

Robert de Halom or Hallum was collated 7th April 1400[60]. He seems to have resigned his office in 1406, when he went to Rome. He was made bishop of Salisbury in 1408.

Angelus, bishop of Ostia, cardinal of Florence, was appointed by the Pope to succeed Halom, and the King confirmed the appointment 28th Oct. 1406[61].

John Wakering was appointed 13th July 1408, and inducted 31st March 1409[62]. His appointment was ratified by the King 6th April 1409[63]. He was promoted to the bishopric of Norwich in 1416.

Henry Romworth[64] was collated 5th June 1416[65], and was in possession of the dignity 10th Dec. 1418.

William Chichley was collated to this archdeaconry 3rd Oct. 1420, and died at Rome in 1424.

Prosper Laurentii de Columna, an Italian, cardinal of St. George, ad velum aureum, appointed archdeacon of Canterbury by papal bull, 10th June 1424[66], but the archbishop did not admit until 26th July 1426. He resigned this dignity for an annual pension of 500 florins for his life.

Thomas Wynterburn. The date of his appointment is not certain. Le Neve says, he was styled archdeacon 1st Sept. 1448[68]; but that must be a mistake, as Chichley was archdeacon at his death in 1466; and Wynterburn, who was present in 1468 in the chapter house when John Oxney was elected prior of Christ Church, expressly declared that he was not present as archdeacon, but as chancellor to the archbishop[69]. A MS. in the British Museum states that he became archdeacon 1st Sept. 1468, and died 7th Sept. 1478.

PREBENDARIES.

Until 11th Aug. 1840[24] there were twelve canonries or prebends in the church of Canterbury; three of which, viz. the first, fourth, and sixth, were in the gift of the archbishop of Canterbury, all the rest were in the gift of the King.

The canons, with the dean, were incorporated 8th April 1542, by letters patent, under the name of the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and Metropolitical Church of Christ in Canterbury.

CANONS IN THE FIRST PREBEND.

Richard Thornden, alias Le Stede, appointed by the charter of incorporation 8th April 1542.

[24] In that year an act (3 and 4 Vict. c. 93) was passed, enacting that in the chapter and cathedral church of Canterbury six canonries shall be suspended in the following order; that is to say, the canonry firstly vacant shall be suspended; and the canonry now held by the archdeacon of Canterbury and the canonry secondly vacant shall be subject to the provisions hereinafter contained respecting the endowment of archdeaconries by the annexation of canonries thereto; and the canonry thirdly vacant shall be suspended, and the canonry fourthly vacant shall be filled up by her Majesty; and the two canonries fifthly and sixthly vacant shall be suspended, and the then next vacant canonry shall be filled up by her Majesty; and the two canonries which shall then next be vacant shall be suspended; and that thereafter, upon every fourth vacancy among the canonries not annexed to any archdeaconry, the lord archbishop of Canterbury shall appoint a canon, and all other vacancies among such last-mentioned canonries shall be filled up by her Majesty.

N. B. Three of these canonries have been suspended by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; one in 1838, another in 1845, and a third in 1846.

ST. ASAPH.

THE diocese of St. Asaph extends into the counties of Flint and Montgomery, Merioneth, Denbigh, and Salop.

The archdeaconry of St. Asaph was coextensive with the limits of the diocese up to 31st Jan. 1844, and was always held by the bishop of this see in commendam, not union. On that day an order in council was made, directing that the dignity and office of Archdeacon of St. Asaph should no longer be holden by the bishop of St. Asaph; a second archdeaconry was at the same time erected, and called the Archdeaconry of Montgomery, and made to consist of the deaneries of Penllyn and Edeirnion, Pool and Caereinion, Caedewen and Ceifeiliog and Mowddy.

The chapter consists of the dean, two archdeacons, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, six prebendaries, seven cursal prebends, and four vicars choral.

BISHOPS.

KENTIGERN, bishop of Glasgow[1], having been expelled from his see, founded a monastery between the rivers Clwyd and Elwy, which during his lifetime was erected into an episcopal see, and he was styled Episcopus

[1] He was consecrated A. D. 540.

Elvensis[2]. He governed this see many years; but about the year 560 he returned to Scotland to his former charge, and left the see to his disciple, named Asaph[3], in honour of whom the bishopric was called St. Asaph. The exact year in which he succeeded Kentigern, or that in which he died, is not known; indeed, all notice of this see is lost until the year 1143, when 1143 8 Steph. Gilbert was consecrated its bishop by Theobald archbishop of Canterbury[4]. It does not appear how long he sat, but it seems to have been about eight years[5].

1152 16 Steph. Geoffrey of Monmouth, the historian[6], appears to have succeeded Gilbert in 1151, and to have been consecrated 23rd Feb. 1151–2[7]. The time of his death is uncertain, but it is supposed to have taken place in 1154.

1154 19 Steph. Richard seems to have succeeded Geoffrey of Monmouth, and was consecrated by archbishop Theobald[8];

[6] Galfridus Arthurus, as he is styled by the chroniclers.

[7] According to Gervase of Canterbury, (col. 1367,) he was consecrated 23rd Feb. "septimo Kal. Marcii 1150;" but that must be wrong, as that day was Thursday in that year. Ralph de Diceto merely says, that in the year 1151 "Gaufridus Artur fit Episcopus Sancti Asaph." Wendover and Matthew of Westminster also fix the year 1151 for that event, as does also the Registrum Ecclesiæ Christi Cantuar.: "Anno ab incarnatione Domini MCLI. Theobaldus Cant. Archiepiscopus et totius Angliæ Primas, &c. vii Cal. Martii sacravit Galefridum, electum Ecclesiæ Sancti Asaph in episcopum apud Lamhetham, acceptâ priùs ab eodem secundum consuetudinem scriptâ de subjectione et obedientiâ sibi exhibendâ professione, &c. Ordinavit autem ad Presbyterum eundem præcedenti Sabbato, i.e. xv Cal. Martii." These dates are quite correct according to the old style of computation, beginning the year 25th March; but in the Annals of Waverley it is correctly placed in 1152.

[8] Act. Pont. Cantuar. Gerv. col. 1665.

but neither the time of his taking possession of the see nor that of his death are known. Wharton[9] thinks that the first event occurred in 1154, and the other in the following year.

1160 Hen. II. Godfrey was the next bishop of this see[10], and was also consecrated by archbishop Theobald[11]: the exact year is not recorded, but it probably was 1160. He deserted his see in 1165, and became abbot of Abingdon[12]. He was deprived in 1175[13].

1175 Hen. II. Adam, a canon of Pershore, was appointed on the deprivation of Godfrey. He was consecrated at Westminster on Sunday 12th Oct.[14] 1175. He died at Oxford in 1181[15], and was buried in the monastery of Osney[16].

1183 Hen. II. John succeeded Adam in this see, and was consecrated at Caen in Normandy 25th June 1183[17]; and he made his profession to archbishop Boniface[18]. He died about 1186[19], and was succeeded by

[10] Bishop Kennet, in a MS. note to his copy of Le Neve, now in the possession of sir Thomas Phillipps, bart., thus writes: "Richard mentioned by Wharton seems to have been only a coadjutor of Godfrey, who never living in his diocess, was for that cause deprived in 1175."

[11] Act. Pont. Gerv. col. 1665. He is styled "Godefridus Laneluensis." Archbishop Theobald died before the middle of the year 1161, and Godfrey assisted at the consecration of archbishop Thomas in 1162. In the Abingdon Register (MS. Cott. Claud. B. vi. fol. 177.) this passage occurs: "Mortuo Walkelino abbate Abendon Godefridus Episcopus de Sancto Asaph factus fuit Procurator istius Abbatiæ per novem annos et dimid. per Henricum Regem. Teste Johanne decano Sarum."

1186 REINER[20], consecrated, according to Wikes, in 1186[21].
32 Hen. II. He was present at the synod holden 19th Oct. 1200[22]; and there was a bishop of St. Asaph, whose initial was R, who was alive in 1219 and 1223. If this be the same prelate who died in 1224[23], he must have been bishop thirty-eight years.

1225 ABRAHAM was consecrated bishop of St. Asaph in 10 Hen. III. 1225[24], and died about 1233[25]. A congé d'élire, addressed to the archdeacon and chapter of St. Asaph, issued 4th Feb. 1233[26], in pursuance of which,

1233 HUGH, a monk of the order of Friars Preachers, was 18 Hen. III. chosen. The royal assent was given to his election 11th April 1233[27], and he was consecrated at Reading 17th June 1235[28]. He witnessed a charter to the monastery of Basingwerk, dated at Coleshill on the Feast of St. James (25th July) 1240[29]; and 30th Aug. 1241 he was a surety for David prince of Wales[30]. The exact date of his death has not been ascertained; but he was succeeded by

1242 HOWEL AP EDNEVET, who was consecrated at Boxgrave
26 Hen. III. in 1242[31]. He died at Oxford, where he was buried, in 1247[32].

[31] He could not have been consecrated by archbishop Edmund, as the Canterbury Register asserts, for that prelate died in 1240. The same Register commits a still greater anachronism in stating that Howel was consecrated with Robert Grosthead: that bishop was certainly consecrated by archbishop Edmund, but the ceremony was performed 3rd June 1235, seven years before the election of Howel ap Ednevet.

The see having been vacant two years, the dean and chapter of St. Asaph bind themselves, 14th Sept. 1249, in all future elections to observe the English rule, and obtain the King's license to elect, and afterwards his assent to the election[33], as did also the bishop elect[34]; and 1249 Hen. III. ANIAN, bishop of St. Asaph, did homage to the King for the lands, &c. pertaining to his bishopric 27th Sept. 1249[35], and he was consecrated before the close of that year[36]. He died in Sept. 1266, and was succeeded by

1267 Hen. III. JOHN II, who was consecrated in 1267 by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of Ely and Llandaff[37]. The see became void again 4th Jan. 1268[38], and 1268 Hen. III. ANIAN II, surnamed de Schonau, prior of Rhudland, was chosen, and obtained the royal assent 24th Sept. 1268[39]. [53] Godwin incorrectly makes Ephraim the successor of David ap Blethin. He derives his authority from the Cambrian Annals, in which there is a double mistake; first, in writing Ephraim for Abraham; and secondly, in the date of the death of that prelate, viz. 1332 instead of 1233. Godwin also makes Henry the successor of Ephraim, and states that a record exists in the Tower which proves that fact; but there, Henry bishop of St. Asaph is written by mistake for Henry bishop of St. David's.

1376 WILLIAM DE SPRIDLINGTON[59], dean of St. Asaph, was

[79] Walsingham, p. 370. He did not, however, die until 1410. Browne Willis writes thus, in a letter to bishop Kennet, dated March 18, 1719: "I hope I have found out the death of John Trevaur, the repudiated bishop of St. Asaph. There is in the Infirmary Chapel of St. Victor's Abbey at Paris this inscription on a tomb, in memory, as I conceive, of him, for it could be no other bishop of the name of John, particularly Hereford—the last bishop of Hereford having been dead six or seven years before, as appears by the date and probate of his will, and buried sumptuously in his own cathedral of Hereford. This must relate to John Trevaur bishop of St. Asaph, who, as I remember, went to Paris in behalf of Owen Glendour, to solicit forces of the French king, and so might lodge privately in an abbey, and there fall sick and be buried. 'Hic jacet reverend. in Christo pater Johannes Episcopus Hereford in Wallia, qui obiit An. Dñi. 1410 die Veneris 10° mensis Aprilis, cujus anima feliciter requiescat in pace. Amen.'"

said to have succeeded, and to have held the see until 1411[80]; but this cannot be correct, as the spiritualities were, by the authority of the archbishop of Canterbury, assigned to Thomas abbot of Shrewsbury in the year 1408[81]. The see was not declared vacant however until after 8th Oct. 1410, the day of the death of Trevaur[82], as it is said; and then

1411 Hen.IV. ROBERT OF LANCASTER[83] was elected, and consecrated at Lincoln 28th June 1411, by Thomas Arundel archbishop of Canterbury. He died in March 1432–3, and 26th April 1433 a license was issued to elect a bishop in his room[84]. The Pope however appointed 1433 Hen.VI. JOHN LOW, alias LOBBE, a Friar Eremite, S.T.P., by bull dated 17th Aug. 1433. He received the temporalities 17th Oct. following[85], and the spiritualities on the 21st of the same month[86]. By his letter dated 24th Oct. 1433, he requested license to be consecrated out of the Church of Canterbury, and 1st Nov. following was assigned for that purpose[87]. He was translated to Rochester in April 1444[88].

1444 Hen.VI. REGINALD PEACOCK, S.T.B., obtained the see by papal provision 22nd April 1444, and the temporalities were restored to him 8th June[89]. He was consecrated on

1450 28Hen.VI. THOMAS [ ] succeeded to the see 27th Jan. 1450, and 28th Jan. 1463[92] was deprived. On 11th March 1465 the custody of the temporalities of the bishopric was granted to Richard Caunton, which, on account of the rebellion of Thomas bishop of St. Asaph, had formerly come into the King's hands and had been granted to Robert bishop of Rochester, and upon whose death they had again come into the King's hands[93]. The custody of the temporalities was subsequently committed to John Stanley[94]. On 30th Oct. 1471 the King pardoned bishop Thomas all offences and misprisions that he had committed[95]; but it would seem that he was not restored to his see, as

1471 11Edw.IV. RICHARD REDMAN had been elected, for 13th Oct. 1471 he obtained a license to be consecrated out of the Church of Canterbury[96]. In 1495 he was translated to Exeter[97]. On the translation of bishop Redman to Exeter

1500 15 H.VII. DAVID AP-YEWORTH, abbot de Valle Crucis, who was consecrated by John archbishop of Canterbury 26th April 1500, and died in 1503[99]. His successor was 1556 2&3 P.&M. Thomas Goldwell, S.T.B., a Benedictine monk, succeeded. As bishop-elect[19], he had a grant of the custody of the temporalities 12th May 1555[20], and 22nd Jan. 1555–6 he obtained plenary restitution of them[21]. Queen Mary intended to translate him to Oxford, and a grant for the restitution of the temporalities of that see to him was made 9th Nov. 1558[22], and Thomas Wood[23] was nominated as bishop of St. Asaph in his stead; but queen Mary died before the translation of the one and the confirmation of the other was perfected; and bishop Goldwell went in voluntary exile[24] and died, and was buried at Rome about the year 1581.

1560 2 Eliz. Richard Davyes, S.T.B. was elected 4th Dec. and had the royal assent to his election 18th Dec. 1559[25]. The significavit to the archbishop is dated 9th Jan. 1559–60[26], and he was consecrated on the 21st of the same month[27]. The temporalities were restored to him 29th March following[28]. to him 18th Dec.; and his lordship, the present bishop of St. Asaph, was installed on the 24th of that month.

The bishopric is rated for first fruits at 187*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*[7] The permanent income of the bishop of St. Asaph was settled at 4200*l.*, by order of council gazetted 17th Nov. 1846.

An order in council dated 12th Dec. 1838, and gazetted 25th Jan. 1839, was passed for prospectively uniting the sees of St. Asaph and Bangor, and fixing the annual sum to be paid out of the revenues thereof towards the augmentation of the incomes of the bishops of the smaller sees; for prospectively augmenting the incomes of the bishops of St. David's and Llandaff; and for prospectively founding the bishopric of Manchester. This however was repealed by act 10 & 11 Vict. c. 108.

The arms of the see are thus blazoned: Sable, two keys in saltire argent.

DEANS[8].

R . . . . held this deanery in 1234 and 1239.

David held it in 1244; another of the same name held it in 1272.

Anian is said to have holden this dignity in 1279, and likewise in 1309, but how long is uncertain[9].

Leoline ap-Madoc was dean in 1357; in that year he was made bishop of this see[10].

Upon the promotion of Leoline, Robert de Walsham was nominated in 1357 by the prince of Wales; but he was compelled to resign[11].

Fouke Salisbury was dean from 1511 to 1543[12]. Ob. 1543.

Richard Puskyn succeeded in 1543, and resigned in 1556[13].

John Gruffith, LL.B., treasurer of Llandaff, succeeded 26th Sept. 1556[14]. He was dean 19th Sept. 1558: so he styles himself in his will of that date, which was proved 3rd Feb. 1558–9.

Maurice Blayne, alias Gruffith, LL.B., appears to have been dean 27th Feb. 1558–9, 1 Eliz.[15].

John Lloyd was made dean 4th April 1559.

Hugh Evans was made dean 26th April 1560. Ob.

BANGOR[1].

THIS diocese extends into the counties of Caernarvon, Merioneth, Montgomery, Denbigh, and over the whole of Anglesey. Attached to the cathedral there are a dean, three archdeacons, viz. Anglesey, Bangor[2], and Merioneth, a precentor, chancellor, and treasurer, two canons or prebends, and two vicars choral.

BISHOPS.

A bishopric is said to have been erected here before the middle of the sixth century by Malgo Conan prince of North Wales.

DANIEL was made the first bishop of the see about the year 516. He is supposed to have died about 10th Dec. 544, and been buried at Bardsey.

ELLODU was bishop of Bangor or Venedotia; ob. about 811.

MORDAF held the see about 940. King Edgar is said to have refounded the cathedral in 975[3].

HERVÆUS[4] was the first bishop of Bangor, about whom there is any certainty, but the date of his taking possession of the see is not known; he was consecrated by Thomas archbishop of York during the vacancy of [1] This diocese was prospectively united with St. Asaph by order in council dated 12 Dec. 1838; but the arrangement was annulled by stat. 10 and 11 Vict. c. 108.

[2] There were formerly three archdeaconries, Bangor, Anglesey, and Merioneth, but the first two were added to the bishopric of Bangor by act of parliament in 1685; they were dissevered from the bishopric by stat. 6 & 7 Vict. cap. 77, § 8, and the two archdeaconries were united under the name of the archdeaconry of Bangor, and a canonry residentiary in the cathedral church of Bangor was permanently annexed thereto by way of endowment.

the see of Canterbury[5], after the death of archbishop Lanfranc in 1089 and the appointment of Anselm in 1093. He was a witness to the foundation charter of the abbey of St. Werbrugh, Chester, in 1093[6], and held the bishopric in July 1100, when the church of Gloucester was rebuilt[7], and he was present at the consecration of Thomas archbishop of York v Cal. Jul. 1109[8]; in which year he was driven from his see by the Welsh, and appointed by the King to the bishopric of Ely, then newly created[9].

The see was vacant about eleven years[10].

1120 20 Hen. I. DAVID was elected by Griffin prince of Wales, and the clergy and people of his principality. He was consecrated at Westminster by Ralph archbishop of Canterbury 4th April 1120[11]; but there is no evidence of the date of his death that can be relied on. He was succeeded by 1139 4 Steph. MAURICE or MEURIC, who was consecrated in 1139[12] by Theobald archbishop of Canterbury, and died in 1161[13].

WILLIAM, prior of St. Augustine, Bristol. The greatest uncertainty relative to this prelate prevails: nothing seems known of him but his name; but if there were a bishop so called about this period, he must have presided some time between the death of Maurice in 1161 and the consecration of Guy in 1177[14].

The see was vacant nearly two years.

1215 MARTIN, abbot of Blanchelande, was chosen, and con-
17 Joh. firmed by the King 13th April 1215: he was consecrated 16th June following[20], and nothing more is known of him. But there is evidently some confusion of persons here, as on the patent roll of the 16th of John, O., abbot of Blanchelande[21], is said to have been elected in April 1215. The initial O however may have been miswritten for C, which might stand for Caducanus: at all events it seems that

1215 CADUCANUS or CADWGAN, "abbas Landefidensis," was
17 Joh. consecrated in 1215, and died at Dore abbey 11th April 1241[22], having been released from his bishopric by pope Gregory IX. in the year 1236. The chapter of Bangor received a license to elect a bishop 7th June 1236[23], in pursuance of which

1236 Howel was elected, but it does not appear on what 20 H. III. day he was consecrated.

1237 Richard, archdeacon of Bangor, received the royal 21 H. III. assent to his election 3rd July 1237[24]. He is generally supposed to have succeeded in 1240 and to have been consecrated in 1250, but those dates are incorrect, as shewn by the date of the royal assent; moreover, in a letter to the Pope he asserts, "se episcopatum Bangorense plusquam triginta annos rexisse;" and as his successor Anian was consecrated in 1267, it is impossible that he could have succeeded later than 1237. The license to elect a bishop in the room of Richard is dated 8th Nov. 1267[25], and

1267 Anian, archdeacon of Anglesey, was elected, and received
52 H. III. the royal assent to his election 12th Dec. 1267[26], on which day the temporalities were restored to him[26]: he also made his profession of obedience to Boniface archbishop of Canterbury in that month[27]. The time of his death is uncertain, but he was alive 26th May 1305[28].

Caducan (possibly archdeacon of Bangor in 1291) is made to succeed Anian, by Godwin in 1306 and by Le Neve in 1303, but there is no evidence extant to prove that a bishop of that name presided over the see of Bangor at that time.

1307 Griffin ap Yerward was consecrated at Carlisle by 35 Edw. I. cardinal Peter De Spano 26th March 1307, because his consecration could not conveniently take place at Canterbury[29]. He died on Sunday next before the feast of St. Philip and St. James [27th May] 1309[30].

On the translation of Richard Yonge to Rochester, Lewis or Llewelyn Bifort, at the desire of Owen Glendour prince of Wales, was elected, and petitioned the Pope to appoint him to the see of Bangor; the archbishop of Canterbury would not, however, confirm him, neither would the King restore the temporalities to him; and, as he had not received the Pope's recognition, he was ejected in the year 1408[61]; and

On 15th May 1418 the King, then at Caen in Normandy, wrote to the bishop of Durham, chancellor of England, stating that "for as much as we have received a Bull directed unto us, which we send you closed under our signet by the bringer of this, touching the promotion of master William Barowe to the bishoprick of Bangor, we will that

Nicholas, according to Godwin, succeeded to bishop Barrowe, but there is no evidence of that fact extant. If he were elected, he certainly was not confirmed bishop of this see.

1426 4 Hen.VI. John Clederowe or Clyderhowe, canon of Chichester, according to the Tower records[66] came next to Barrowe in the see of Bangor, and made his profession of obedience to the archbishop 20th March 1424–5[67], and received the temporalities 15th Jan. 1425–6[68]. He made his profession of obedience to the archbishop 6th Feb. 1435–6[70], received the spiritualities 16th Nov. 1436[71], and the temporalities on the 27th of the same month[72]. PREBENDARIES.

LLANVAIR.

Richard Vachan held this stall anno 1504; and was succeeded by David Yale, LL.B., about 1508.
William Knight, LL.D., was possessed of it anno 1529, having been collated in 1520, vice Yale resigned. And on Knight's being made bishop of Wells anno 1541, Fulk Salisbury, dean of St. Asaph, obtained this stall. And at his death, anno 1543, it was conferred upon William Capon, S.T.P., brother to the bishop of that name. He died anno 1550.
John Gwyn, A.B., was collated 7th Oct. 1550. He resigned it the next year to Griffith Wynn; who was prevailed upon soon after to quit it to John Gwyn, A.M., who had resigned it before to him, re-admitted 7th Jan. 1554. He died anno 1574, being LL.D. and possessed of this dignity.

BATH AND WELLS.

THIS diocese until lately contained all Somersetshire, except Holy Cross, St. Mary Redcliff, and St. Thomas with Leigh chapels to Bedminster*, which are in the diocese of Bristol.

The monastery of Bath was dissolved in 1543–4, and an act of parliament passed (stat. 34 and 35 Hen. VIII. c. 15) for making the dean and chapter of Wells to be one sole chapter for the bishop of Bath and Wells.

The members of the chapter are the dean, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, subdean, archdeacon of Wells, archdeacon of Bath, archdeacon of Taunton, and fifty prebendaries with stalls.

BISHOPS OF WELLS.

The origin of this bishopric is involved in much obscurity[1], which is not easy to remove. The received opinion is, that in the council called at king Edward's command by Plegemund archbishop of Canterbury in the year 905[2], it was decreed that three bishoprics should be created in the province of the Gevisi, in addition to those of Winchester and Sherborne, then existing, though at that time vacant; and Wells,

* The parish of Bedminster was to be dissevered from the diocese of Bath and Wells, and to form part of the diocese of Bristol and Gloucester, by order in council 19th July 1837.

[2] Concil. Angl. tom. i. p. 200.

Crediton, and St. Petrock, were accordingly made episcopal sees. The council being dissolved, the archbishop went to Rome and announced to the Pope the decree of the council. He returned to England in the following year; but it was not until 909 that matters were sufficiently matured to carry out the resolution of the King and council. In that year, however, Plegemund in one day ordained seven bishops[3], and among them five in the province of Gevisi; Frithestan to Winchester, Werstan to Sherborne, Aethelm to Wells, Eadulf to Crediton, and Aethelstan to St. Petrock; Bernethus to the South Saxons, and Coenulf to Dorchester.

909 Aethelm[4], was the first bishop of Wells. He was removed to Canterbury about the year 923.

923 Wulfelm succeeded to the see of Wells on the translation of Aethelm to Canterbury, and upon the death of that archbishop was himself also translated thither about the year 928[5].

928 Alpheagus[6], Aelfegus[7], or Elfeh[8], succeeded Wulfelm in the see of Wells. The time of his death is not known, but he witnessed a charter of king Aethelstan, dated in 931[9].

[3] The story of Plegemund ordaining seven bishops, usually taken from Malmesbury, is also to be found nearly verbatim in MS. Bodley 579, which was given to the cathedral of Exeter by bishop Leofric, who died A.D. 1073. It contains difficulties and contradictions which have puzzled all the ecclesiastical writers from Baronius to Wilkins.

Wulfhelm appears to have followed Alpheagus in the see of Wells, but the date of his consecration is uncertain: he however witnessed charters in the year 934, and continued to do so until 955[10].

955 Brihthelm, a monk of Glastonbury, is said to have succeeded Wulfhelm in the bishopric of Wells in 958, and to have been chosen in the year 959 to succeed Odo in the archiepiscopal see of Canterbury; but the King persuaded him to continue in his own see. For the reason assigned in note[11] the date of his accession is here given as 955. He died 15th May 973[12], and was buried at Wells[13].

973 Kynewardus[14], abbot of Middleton, succeeded Brihthelm in 973: he died in 975[15].

975 Sigarus or Sigegarus, abbot of Glastonbury, succeeded to the see of Wells in 975[16], and died iv Cal. Julii[17] (28th June) 997[18].

[11] Godwin and those who follow him make three contemporary bishops of this name, viz. of London, Winchester, and Wells, succeed in the same year 958. This cannot be proved, nor is it probable; it, however, increases the difficulty of identification: a bishop of that name witnessed charters in 955, and he most likely was the bishop of Wells, as it appears from other authorities that Theodred bishop of London was alive in that year, (Kemb. vol. ii. p. 306,) as was also Aelfsic bishop of Winchester, (Ibid. 307.) 1013 Aethelwinus, abbot of Evesham[23], succeeded Lyfing[24] in 1013; but he was ejected from his see by

Brithwinus[25], who was himself deposed, and Aethelwinus again had the see[26], which he held till his death, when Brithwinus re-entered, and held the bishopric during the remainder of his life[27].

1033 Dudoca or Dudeca or Bodeca was consecrated in 1033[30], and died in 1060[31].

BISHOPS OF BATH AND WELLS.

1135 Steph. ROBERT, a monk of Lewes, succeeded bishop Godfrey in 1135[41]. During his episcopate a serious dispute arose between the canons of Wells and those of Bath relative to the designation or title of the bishops of the see, and this prelate decided that he and his successors should thereafter be styled Bishops of Bath and Wells[42]. He died in 1166, having governed the see thirty-one years[43], and was buried at Bath.

The see vacant upwards of eight years.

1174 2 Hen. II. REGINALD FITZ JOCELINE, archdeacon of Salisbury[44], was elected bishop of Bath and Wells, and consecrated in Savoy by Richard archbishop of Canterbury 23rd June 1174[45], and enthroned 24th Nov. follow-

[95] The manner of his election is thus detailed in an original letter in the Tower of London, addressed to John de Langton the King's chancellor. "Venerandæ discretionis viro et amico suo, si placet fidelissimo domino J. de Langton, illustris Regis Angliæ cancellario, suus in omnibus W. de Werem' seipsum ad præcepta paratum. Qualiter et quomodo magister W. de Marchia apud Bathoniam nuperrimè in episcopum ejusdem loci canonicè electus extiterat, vobis nuncio sub hiis verbis—Prior Bathon' et ejus conventus ad electionem per viam scrutinii voluerunt libentissimè processisse, eò quod omnes monachi suum priorem eligisse putabant in episcopum et pastorem. Ad hujusmodi electionem per illam viam canonici Wellensis ecclesiæ suum assensum præbere penitus recusarunt. Propter quod monachi et canonici Wellenses per viam compromissionis unanimiter concordarunt, et suas literas patentes, prout postulat ordo juris, fieri et consignari procurarunt. Die tertia quinque monachi Bathon. et quinque canonici, videlicet præcentor, cancellarius et archidiaconus Wellen. ac decanus Eborum et Malculinus de Harlegh, per viam compromissionis electi, in capitulo invocata Sancti Spiritus gratia ad eligendum Pontificem concorditer accesserunt. Et cæteri canonici et monachi de capitulo, prout justum extitit recesserunt. Statim monachi, videlicet quinque ad hoc electi in prædicta forma nominaverant suum priorem, semel, secundo, tertio et quarto: et prædicti quinque canonici suum assensum illis in nominatione illa dare noluerunt. Præfati quinque monachi loquebantur ad invicem, et sciebant, quod ubi major pars, ibi electio &c. Et quod decanus Ebor. et dominus Malculinus venerunt apud Bathoniam pro promotione prædicti magistri W. de Marchia statim eundem magistrum W. nominarunt. Et ex quo isti quinque monachi, et isti duo canonici, videlicet decanus Eborum et dominus Malculinus de Harlegh in personam præfati W. de Marchia consenserunt ponendum esse stramen pro tribus canonicis supradictis. Et facta nominatione de prædicti magistri W. persona per istos septem supradictos, statim inceperunt laudare Deum per Psalmum consuetum. Et post celebrationem istius Psalmi, prior Bathon. et decanus Wellen. coram omni populo in ecclesia commoranti pronunciavit, modum electionis de persona magistri Willielmi supradicti. Et statim surrexit quidam rusticus in ecclesia illa et dixit ista verba, 'Cristes cors and Seinte Marie habbe hi halle that hine chose bissop of Bathe.' BRISTOL.

THIS bishopric was erected 4th June 1542, by letters patent of that date[1].

The diocese was made out of those of Salisbury, Worcester, and Wells; from the first the county and archdeaconry of Dorset were taken; from Worcester the several parishes in the county of Gloucester, locally situated in the city of Bristol; and from Wells three churches and chapels also in the city of Bristol.

The cathedral had a dean, six prebendaries or major canons, six minor canons, &c.

The see of Bristol (with certain exceptions) was united with that of Gloucester in October 1836 by act of parliament pursuant to the recommendation of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

BISHOPS.

1542 PAUL BUSHE, S.T.B., last rector of the college of Bon-
31 H.VIII. hommes at Edington in Wiltshire, was nominated as the first bishop of this see in the charter above mentioned; and the temporalities were given to him 16th June 1542, on which day the archbishop of Canterbury was desired to consecrate him[2]; and that ceremony was accordingly performed 25th June, in the parish church of Hampton[3]. He resigned his bishopric to queen Mary in 1554[4]. He died 11th Oct.

1558, and was buried in Bristol cathedral[5]. A license to elect a bishop in the room of Paul Bushe issued 19th March 1553–4[6]; but it does not seem to have been acted on, as another license was sent to the dean and chapter 25th Oct. following[7].

1554 1&2 P.&M. JOHN HOLYMAN, S.T.P., formerly a monk of Reading, was elected, and received the royal assent 10th Nov. 1554[8]. He was consecrated in the bishop of London's chapel[9] on the 18th, and obtained the temporalities on the 28th of the same month[10]. He died 20th Dec. 1558, and was buried in the church of Hamborough in Oxfordshire[11].

After the death of bishop Holyman the see of Bristol was vacant upwards of three years.

1562 4 Eliz. RICHARD CHEYNEY, bishop of Gloucester, obtained the Queen's permission to hold the see of Bristol in commendam with his own of Gloucester 29th April 1562[12], and accordingly he took the administration of this bishopric 3rd May following, and held them both during his life. He died 25th April 1579, and was buried in Gloucester cathedral.

Both sees were vacant about two years after the death of bishop Cheyney.

1581 23 Eliz. JOHN BULLINGHAM, archdeacon of Huntingdon, was appointed by the Queen in 1581 to hold the see of Bristol with that of Gloucester. He was consecrated 3rd Sept. 1581[12*]. He resigned Bristol in 1589, in which year her Majesty nominated[13]

1589 32 Eliz. RICHARD FLETCHER, S.T.D., dean of Peterborough;

CHICHESTER[1].

THE diocese of Chichester now contains the whole county of Sussex, a number of peculiars locally belonging to the see of Canterbury having been annexed to it by an order in council dated 8th Aug. 1845. The members of the chapter are a dean, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, the archdeacon of Chichester, the archdeacon of Lewes, 31 prebendaries, and some minor officers.

BISHOPS OF SELSEY[2].

WILFRED, having been a second time expelled from his see of York and Hexham in the year 681 by Ecgfrid king of Northumbria, wandered about from place to place, animated by a pious desire to propagate the Christian faith[3]. At length he undertook the conversion of the South Saxons from idolatry, Aedilualch their king having been lately baptized in Mercia by the persuasion of Uulfhere the sovereign of that province[4]. From Aedilualch, Wilfred obtained the peninsula of Selsey, then inhabited by eighty families; and there he founded a monastery, and exercised all the functions and offices of a bishop[5]. He converted and baptized during the five years he resided there no less than two hundred and fifty persons[6], whence he is popularly considered as the first bishop of Selsey. Upon the death of Ecgfrid of Northumbria in 685 Wilfred was recalled to Hexham, and Selsey fell under the jurisdiction of the bishop of Winchester[6]; Daniel, who then held that see, is therefore sometimes improperly considered as the second bishop of Selsey. In reality however Eadberct, second abbot of Selsey, became by a synodal decree the first bishop of Selsey[7], though Malmesbury and Florence of Worcester make him the second bishop of that see[8].

Eolla succeeded to the bishopric of Selsey on the death of Eadbert, but he did not preside there very long, and "Episcopatus usque hodie (731.) cessavit[9]."

The next name that appears in the ancient list of bishops of Selsey is 733 Sigga[10] or Sigfrid, who seems to have been the third bishop of Selsey, and was consecrated by Taetwine archbishop of Canterbury in 733[11]; and he was present at a synod summoned by Cuthbert archbishop of Canterbury in 746[12].

BISHOPS OF CHICHESTER.

1070 5 Will. I. STIGAND[38], the King's chaplain, was appointed by the King at Whitsuntide 1070. He removed his seat from Selsey to Chichester about the year 1085[39], and became the first bishop of Chichester[40]. He died in 1087[41].

1087 1 Will. II. WILLIAM (according to the lists in Malmesbury and Florence) succeeded, but according to other authorities

1088 1 Will. II. GODFREY[42] succeeded Stigand in the see of Chichester, and died in the same year[43]; after whose decease the see was vacant nearly three years, when

1091 4 Will. II. RALPH DE LUFFA was appointed to it[44]. He died 14th Dec. 1125, and was buried in Chichester cathedral in the passage before St. Mary's chapel, where there was formerly a plain stone bearing these words, "Radulfus Episcopus cognomine Luffa."

1125 25 Hen. I. SEFFRIDE or SIGEFRID, abbot of Glastonbury[45], was nominated by the King in 1125[46], and was consecrated by William archbishop of Canterbury 12th April in that year[47]. He was deposed in 1145, and died in 1151[48].

1148 13 Steph. HILARY was nominated to the bishopric of Chichester in 1146[49], and consecrated by command of the Pope in 1148[50]. He died in 1169[51].

The see was void about four years.

1174 (20 Hen. II.) JOHN DE GRENEFORD, dean of Chichester, was elected in 1173, and consecrated at Lambeth 6th Oct. 1174[52]. He died in 1180[53].

1180 (26 Hen. II.) SEFFRIDE II, archdeacon and dean of Chichester, was consecrated 16th Nov. 1180[54]. He died in 1204[55].

1204 (6 Joh.) SIMON DE WELLS, archdeacon of Wells, was elected between the 1st and 9th April 1204[56]; and made profession of obedience 11th July 1204[57]. He made extensive reparations in Chichester cathedral, and obtained the King's license to convey marble from Purbeck for that purpose[58]. He died in 1207[59].

NICHOLAS DE AQUILA is said to have succeeded Simon de Wells in this see, but there is no evidence of such an appointment. It appears, on the contrary, that the see was vacant 7th Dec. 1207; 25th Feb. 1209–10; 12th June 1213; and 30th Sept. 1214.

RICHARD POORE, dean of Salisbury, was chosen[60], and made his profession of obedience to archbishop Stephen at Reading in Jan. 1214–15. He was consecrated on the 25th of the same month[61]; and translated to Salisbury in 1217[62]. The custody of the bishopric of Chichester was granted 27th June 1217 to Richard bishop of Salisbury, (late bishop of Chichester[63].)

1217 (2 Hen. III.) RALPH DE WARHAM, prior of Norwich, had the royal assent to his election 17th Dec. 1217[64]. He made his profession to archbishop Simon, and was consecrated 7th Jan. 1217–18[65]. He died 14th Sept. 1222[66]. The custody of the bishopric of Chichester was committed to Thomas de Blumville 17th Sept. 1222[65].

1222 7 Hen. III. Ralph de Neville, dean of Lichfield and chancellor of Chichester, obtained the royal assent to his election 1st Nov. 1222[66]; but he was not consecrated until 21st April 1224[67]. He was elected to the archiepiscopal see of Canterbury on the death of Richard Weathershed, and his election confirmed by the King, who restored the temporalities to him; but the Pope set aside the election. Bishop Neville became chancellor of England 12th Feb. 1226–7, which office he held till his death 1st Feb. 1243–4. He was buried behind the high altar of Chichester cathedral, on the south side. The custody of the bishopric was granted 9th Feb. 1243–4 to Bernard de Sabaudia and Simon de Passelewe[68], and the license to elect another bishop in the room of Ralph de Neville issued on the 17th of the same month[69].

Robert Passelewe, archdeacon of Lewes[70], was elected and the royal assent given to his election 19th April 1244[71]; but his election being disapproved by the archbishop elect of Canterbury and the rest of the bishops, it was quashed[72], and subsequently annulled by papal bull, dated from Lyons 21st July 1245[73].

He died 3rd April 1253[76], ætat. 56, and was buried in Chichester cathedral in the nave of the church near the altar of St. Edmund the Confessor against the column. His body was subsequently removed to a more honourable place in the cathedral. The royal license to elect a new bishop in the stead of Richard de la Wich issued 14th April 1253[77].

1253 37 H. III. John[78] Clipping, chancellor of Chichester, was chosen 21st May 1253[79], received the royal assent on the 23rd[80], and his election was confirmed by Boniface archbishop of Canterbury on the 25th of the same month[81]. He died in the middle of May 1262, and the dean and chapter on the 21st of that month pray the King to issue his license to elect another bishop in his room[82]. The King issued his license accordingly 26th May 1262[83], and 1262 46 H. III. Stephen de Berkstead was elected, and had the temporalities restored 20th June 1262. He made his profession to archbishop Boniface, and on Sunday 24th Sept. following he was consecrated[84]. He died 21st Oct. 1287[85].

1288 16 Edw. I. Gilbert de Sancto Leofardo or Leopoldo[86], treasurer of Chichester, was elected 30th Jan. 1287–8, and obtained the royal assent and also the temporalities 24th June following[87]. He made his profession of obedience to archbishop John, and by him he was consecrated 5th Sept. in the same year[88], and died 1305 33 Edw. I. John de Langton, the chancellor of England, was elected 5th April 1305, and obtained the royal assent to his election 7th May[91]. He had the temporalities granted to him 16th July[92]. He made his profession to archbishop Robert, and was consecrated by him 19th Sept. following[93]. He died 17th June[94] 1337, and was buried in his cathedral against the great south window at the end of the cross aisle. On 22nd July 1337 the license to elect a successor to John de Langton issued[95].

1337 11 Ed. III. Robert de Stratford, archdeacon of Canterbury and chancellor of England, received the royal assent to his election 24th August 1337[96], and his temporalities 21st Sept.[97] He was confirmed 23rd Oct. and consecrated 30th Nov. following[98]. He died at his manor of Aldyngbourn 9th April 1362[99]. His will, dated 9th April 1362, was proved 26th April 1362[1]. The license to elect a bishop on his death issued 25th April[2].

ST. DAVID'S.

THE diocese of St. David's, anterior to the year 1844, extended into Caermarthenshire, Pembrokeshire, Brecknockshire, Radnorshire, Glamorganshire, Cardiganshire, Montgomeryshire, Monmouthshire [1], and Herefordshire.

Attached to the cathedral are the bishop, who is quasi decanus, the precentor, treasurer, chancellor, and the archdeacons of St. David's, Brecknock, Caermarthen, and Cardigan, besides eight prebendaries, and six canons cursal, being in all twenty-two. Of these the precentor, chancellor, and treasurer are styled "Residentiarii nati."

ARCHBISHOPS OF CAERLEON.

The first holder of this see is said to have been

DUBRITIUS, who is styled "Archiepiscopus Urbis Legionum;" and who, after holding the office for some years, resigned it to his disciple [2]

DAVID, who is said to have removed the see from Caerleon to Menevia, and, according to some accounts, to have lived to the age of 146 years. He was buried in the cathedral, which he caused to be erected [3].

[1] By order in council 31st Jan. 1844, that part of the deanery of Breccon in Monmouthshire, in the diocese of St. David's, was dissevered therefrom and annexed to that of Llandaff; and by another order in council 1st Sept. 1846, those parts of the parishes of Llangattock and Llangundier in the diocese of St. David's were dissevered therefrom and placed in that of Llandaff.

[2] Beatus igitur Dubricius ad heremiticam vitam totis viribus anhelans, archiepiscopali fasce gliscens absolvi, pristinæ dignitatis sede se sponte deposuit. Cui successit in archiepiscopatum agius David avunculus regis. Vit. S. Dubric. Archiepis.

[3] Obiit anno 546, et in Rosina Valle sepultus est (Antiq. Cœnob. Glaston. p. 52); but according to the Annales Menevensis he died in 542, and to the Annales Cambriæ in 601.

1147 DAVID FITZGERALD, archdeacon of Cardigan, was conse-

[38] De jure ecclesiæ Menev. p. 584. "The first papal provision to any English see was that of pope Innocent III. to Giraldus Cambrensis for the see of St. David's in 1199, whom he did not yet absolutely name, but procured to be elected at Rome, and then would have supported his title without the King's consent. The ground of all provi-

his assent to the election[39], he was not consecrated, and he resigned the see 10th Nov. (in vigilia sancti Martini) 1203, worn out with vexatious altercations; and 1203 5 Joh. Geoffrey de Hennelawe, prior of Lanthony, was elected on the same day that Giraldus resigned. He made his profession of obedience in St. Catherine's chapel, Westminster, and was consecrated in the octaves of St. Andrew 1203[40], after the see had been void four years. He died in 1214, and was succeeded by

1215 17 Joh. Gervase or Jorwerth, abbot of Tal-y-Llecheu[41], who was unanimously elected, although the King had requested the chapter to elect Hugh Foliot archdeacon of Salop[42]. He obtained the royal assent 18th June 1215[43]. He was consecrated 7th Dec. following[44], and died in 1229[45]. The license to elect a bishop in the room of Gervase issued 27th Jan. 1228–9[46], in pursuance of which

1230 13 H. III. Anselm le Gros[47], treasurer of Exeter, was elected, and obtained the royal assent 7th April 1229[48]; he

[39] The King appears to have been very much irritated at Giraldus' election, and at his persisting to contest his right with the King. On several occasions he reiterated his determination never to give his assent to it. "Non consentimus nec unquam consensimus," are the words he uses in one of his mandates. In another he says, "Unde scire vos volumus quod nunquam in hoc assensum præbuimus nec umquam ei consentiemus sed ei in hoc penitus deficimus." On another occasion he says, "Sciatis quod Giraldus archidiaconus de Brechinou manifeste operatur contra coronam et dignitatem nostram qui se gerit electum Menevensem cum nos in eum eligendum nunquam præbuimus assensum."

1296 DAVID MARTIN[62] was elected in June 1293, and re-
25 Edw. I. ceived the royal assent 28th July[63] following. He was confirmed 30th Sept., and received the temporalities 11th Oct.[64]. The Pope however was not satisfied with the election, perhaps for the reason mentioned in note [62], and summoned him to Rome before consecration; king Edward sent to his Holiness letters[65] commendatory of Martin's life, conversation, parentage, and loyalty, and entreated the Pope's favour in his behalf[66]. The court of Rome having confirmed the election, he was consecrated in Rome in Dec. 1296[67]. The King issued another mandate 24th Jan. 1296–7 to restore the temporalities to the new bishop[68]. He died 9th March 1327–8 at his manor of Landesey, and was buried in St. David's cathedral. The precentor and chapter of St. David's inform the King 17th March 1327–8 of the death of David Martin their late bishop, and recommend Henry de Gower archdeacon of St. David's to supply his place[69]. The congé d'élire issued accordingly on the 26th of that month[70], and 21st April the precentor and chapter inform the King that they had elected

1328 HENRY DE GOWER, archdeacon of St. David's[71]; who
2 Ed. III. obtained the royal assent 1st May 1328[72], and the temporalities on the 26th of the same month[73]. He [62] Godwin, on the authority of the Chronicle of Osney, states that on the death of bishop Becke, David of St. Edmund's was elected, and the see of Canterbury being then void, the chapter of Canterbury confirmed the election. If this be so, it may account for the proceedings in the court of Rome against David Martin mentioned in the text, about which there is some little difficulty.

He was translated to Worcester, pursuant to papal bull dated 22nd Oct. 1352.

1361 35 Ed. III. Adam Houghton was also provided to this see by papal bull of 20th Sept. 1361: he received the spiritualities 15th Nov., and the temporalities 8th Dec.[84] He died 13th Feb. 1388–9[85]; and his will, dated 8th Feb. 1388–9,

He died at London 28th July 1397[90], and his will was proved 11th Aug.[91] following. A license to elect a bishop vice John Gilbert issued 16th Aug. 1397[92]; in pursuance of which 1397 21 Ric. II. Guy de Mona was elected, who also had the Pope's bull of provision dated 30th Aug. 1397; he was consecrated 11th Nov. following; but he did not make his profession of obedience to the archbishop until 9th Oct. 1401[93], and consequently did not receive the spiritualities before the 30th of the following month[94]. This undoubtedly induced Le Neve to assign the year 1401 for his becoming bishop; but the King treated him as bishop of St. David's from the time of his consecration[95]. He died 31st Aug. 1407 at Charlton in Kent, and was buried in the conventual church of Leedes in that county. His will was made 17th Aug.

1407[96]. A congé d'élire vice bishop Guy issued 2nd Oct. 1407[97]; nevertheless 1408 9 Hen. IV. HENRY CHICHELEY, LL.D., chancellor of Salisbury, was provided to this see by pope Gregory XII, 4th Oct. 1407. The King restored the temporalities to him 3rd April 1408[98], and he was consecrated before the 27th April 1408. He made his profession of obedience 26th Aug. following, and received the spiritualities on that day[99]; but he was not enthroned until 20th May 1411. He was translated to Canterbury by bull dated 27th April 1414[1].

1414 2 Hen. V. JOHN CATRIK or KETERICH, archdeacon of Surrey, was provided to this see by the Pope 27th April 1414[2], and the temporalities were restored to him 2nd June following[3]. He made his profession of obedience on the 18th of the next month, and 1st Feb. 1414–5 he was translated to Lichfield and Coventry.

1415 3 Hen. V. STEPHEN PATRYNGTON, a Carmelite friar and the King's confessor, was provided to the see of St. David's by bull of provision dated 1st Feb. 1414–5, and consecrated 19th June 1415[4]. The temporalities were restored to him on the 16th of that month[5], and in 1417 he was translated to Chichester[6].

1418 6 Hen. V. BENEDICT NICHOLLS, bishop of Bangor, was translated to the see of St. David's 15th Dec. 1417[7], and he made his profession of obedience to the Archbishop 12th Feb. following. The temporalities were restored

1433 12 Hen. VI. THOMAS RODBURN, a canon of Salisbury and archdeacon of Sudbury, was provided to this see by papal bull dated 5th Oct. 1433[11]. The temporalities were restored to him 16th Dec. in that year[12], and he was consecrated 31st Jan. 1433–4[12*]. The time of his death does not appear, but the license to elect his successor is dated 3rd July 1442[13].

1442 20 Hen. VI. WILLIAM LINWOOD, LL.D., dean of the Court of Arches, was appointed by the Pope, and the King restored the temporalities to him 14th Aug. 1442[14]. He was consecrated in the chapel of St. Stephen, at Westminster, in 1442[15]. He died 21st Oct. 1446, and was buried in St. Stephen's chapel, Westminster[15*]. His will, dated 22nd Nov. 1443, was proved 26th Nov. 1446[16]. to this see by papal bull dated x Kal. Feb. (23rd Jan. 1446–7). The temporalities were restored to him 2nd March 1446–7[19], and he was consecrated in King's College, Cambridge, 7th May following[20]; but he died within fifteen days of his consecration, and was succeeded by 1447 26 Hen. VI. JOHN DE LA BERE[21], dean of Wells, promoted to the bishopric of St. David's by papal bull dated 15th Sept. 1447[22]. He was consecrated 12th Nov., made his profession of obedience to the archbishop on the 13th, and had the temporalities restored to him on the 14th of that month[23]. On 15th Feb. 1456–7 he was excused from attending parliament on account of his age and infirmities[24]. He seems to have resigned his bishopric before his death, as he obtained the King's pardon 6th Feb. 1461[25], after the temporalities had been restored to his successor.

1460 39 Hen. VI. ROBERT TULLY, S.T.P., was provided to this see by papal bull. On 28th Aug. 1460 he obtained a license to be consecrated[26], and restitution of the temporalities 20th Oct. following[27]. He died in 1481, and was buried at Tenby in Pembrokeshire.

1482 22 Edw. IV. RICHARD MARTYN, archdeacon of London, was promoted to the see of St. David's by papal bull dated 26th April 1482; the King had however granted to him

1483 THOMAS LANGTON was provided to this see by papal
1 Ric. III. bull dated 4th July 1483[33], but to which he had already been elected; king Edward V. granted to him, 21st May 1483, as bishop elect, the custody of the temporalities of the see[34], and Richard III. confirmed his nephew's grant 6th July following[35]. On 23rd Aug. he obtained a license to be consecrated[36]. He was translated to Salisbury by papal bull dated 8th Feb. 1484–5[37], and he was succeeded by

1485 HUGH PAVY[38] or PARRY, archdeacon of Wiltshire, had,
1 H. VII. 2nd May 1485, a grant of the custody of the temporalities of the bishopric of St. David's, vacant by the translation of Thomas the last bishop to the see of Salisbury[39], and plenary restitution of them 19th Sept. following[40]. On 12th Nov. following he obtained license to be consecrated[41]. The exact date of his death has not been found, but he was buried at Bedminster, near Bristol, and was succeeded by

1496 JOHN MORGAN alias YOUNG, archdeacon of Caermar-
12 H. VII. then, and dean of Windsor. He had license to be consecrated dated 12th Nov. 1496[42], and the temporalities were restored to him on the 23rd of that month[43].

ELY.

UNTIL the territorial alterations were made in this diocese, pursuant to the various orders in council based on the recommendations of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, this see contained all Cambridgeshire, except Iselham, which belonged to the see of Rochester; and Ashley, Burwell, Cheveley, Chipenham, Fordham, Kirtling alias Catlidge, Kennet Landwade, Newmarket All Saints, Outwell, Snailwell, Soham cum Barway Capella, Sylverley, Upwell cum Welney Capella, Wicken, and Woodyton, in the diocese of Norwich. It had also one parish, Emneth, in the county of Norfolk.

In this diocese there were a dean, archdeacon of Ely, eight prebendaries, &c.

By an order in council dated 19th April 1837, gazetted 30th May 1837, the archdeaconry of Bedford and part of the archdeaconry of Huntingdon were transferred from the diocese of Lincoln to that of Ely, and part of the archdeaconry of Sudbury from the diocese of Norwich was also transferred to Ely; and by another order in council dated 10th April 1839, gazetted 23rd April 1839, certain other parishes were transferred from the diocese of Lincoln to that of Ely.

The right of appointing the archdeacons of Bedford, Huntingdon, and Sudbury was by the first mentioned order in council vested in the bishop of Ely and his successors bishops of Ely for ever.

BISHOPS.

THE bishopric of Ely was created out of the see of Lincoln in the year 1108[1]. Its revenues were derived from the possessions of the monastery originally founded by Etheldreda daughter of Anna king of the East Angles[2], but remodelled about the year 970 by Ethelwold bishop of Winchester, who introduced an abbot and regulars, and rebuilt and amply endowed the monastery; which was further enriched by the munificence of king Edgar and other benefactors[3].

Richard the last abbot of Ely, intoxicated with his vast wealth, and impatient of being under the authority of the bishop of Lincoln, endeavoured to persuade the King, to erect his monastery into an episcopal see, and make him bishop thereof; but his ambition was cut short by a sudden death. The project, however, was carried out by king Henry, who, by the authority of the reigning pope, with the consent of the bishop of Lincoln and his chapter, and the advice of all the other bishops and abbots of the realm, converted this opulent monastery into a bishopric[4]; and 1109 10 Hen. I. HERVEUS, bishop of Bangor, who had been driven from his see by the Welsh, was appointed as the first bishop of Ely[5], and consecrated 27th June 1109[6]. He died 30th Aug. 1131, and was buried at Ely[7].

After the death of Herveus, the see was vacant two years.

1133 NIGELLUS, nephew of Roger bishop of Salisbury, was 34 Hen. I. nominated 28th May 1133, and consecrated at Lambeth 1st Oct. following, by William archbishop of Canterbury[8]. He was ejected from his bishopric by king Stephen at Christmas 1139[9]; but shortly afterwards restored. He died 30th May* (iii Kal. Junii) 1169 in the 36th year of his episcopate, and was buried on the following Sunday in the church of St. Etheldreda, near the altar of the Holy Cross.

The see was vacant nearly five years, between the death of Nigellus and the consecration of his successor.

1174 GEOFFREY RIDEL or RYDALL, archdeacon of Canterbury,
0 Hen. II. was elected in 1173[10], and enthroned on Ascension-day 17th May 1173[11], but not consecrated until 6th Oct. 1174[12]. He died at Winchester 21st Aug. 1189[13], and was buried in his cathedral[14].

1189 WILLIAM DE LONGCHAMP, the King's chancellor, was
1 Ric. I. elected at Pipewell 15th or 16th Sept. 1189, and consecrated at Lambeth 31st Dec.[15], and enthroned 6th Jan. 1189–90[16]. He was appointed Pope's legate by bull dated 5th June 1190[17], and guardian of the realm during the absence of Richard I. in the Holy Land[18]; but owing to his misrule he was compelled to flee from England[19]. He died at Poitiers 31st Jan. 1196–7[20].

1198 EUSTACE, dean of Salisbury, the successor of William
0 Ric. I. de Longchamp, was elected in the presence of the King at Vaudreuil in Normandy 10th Aug. 1197[21], but was not consecrated until the fourth Sunday in Lent (8th March) 1197–8. He died at Reading 4th Feb.[22] (ii Non. Febr.) 1214–5[23], and was buried in the church of Ely, near the altar of St. Mary[24].

On the death of bishop Eustace, Geoffrey de Burgh, archdeacon of Norwich, was elected; but before the publication of his election, the monks elected Robert of York[25], who possessed himself of the spiritualities without consecration, and held them for nearly five years; but king Henry III. appealing to the Pope on the subject[26] his Holiness quashed both elections[27], and

1220 4 Hen. III. JOHN, abbot of Fountains, commonly called JOHN DE FONTIBUS, was elected, and the royal assent given to his election 24th Dec. 1219[27*]. He was consecrated 8th March 1219–20 (in medio quadragesimæ)[28], and enthroned on the 25th of the same month[29]; died 6th May (ii Non. Maii) 1225, and was buried in his own cathedral[30]. The custody of the temporalities was granted 10th May to Thomas Blunville[31], and the license to elect a new bishop issued 11th May 1225[32], in pursuance of which

1225 9 Hen. III. GEOFFREY DE BURGH (DE BURGO)[33], archdeacon of Norwich, was again chosen. He received the royal assent 2nd June 1225[34], and was consecrated on the 29th of that month[35]. On 17th Dec. 1228[36] he died, and was buried in his own cathedral on the 27th of that month[37]. The congé d'élire, vice bishop de Burgh, issued 10th Jan. 1228–9[38].

1229 Hen.III. Hugh de Norwold or Northwolde, abbot of St. Edmondsbury, received the royal assent to his election 3rd Feb. 1228–9[39], and was consecrated on Trinity Sunday 10th June (iv Id. Junii) 1229[40]. He died 6th Aug. (viii Id. Aug.) 1254[41], and was buried in his own cathedral. The custody of the bishopric was granted 12th Aug. 1254[42]. The date of the license for the election of the next bishop does not appear, but

1254 Hen.III. William de Kilkenny or Kirkenny, archdeacon of Coventry, and chancellor of England, was chosen by the dean and chapter about Michaelmas[43]. He obtained the royal assent to his election 25th Dec. 1254[44], and was consecrated in Savoy*, by Boniface archbishop of Canterbury, 15th Aug. 1255[45]. He died in Spain 21st Sept. (xi Kal. Oct.) 1256, and his body was buried at "Sugho" in that kingdom, but his heart was brought to England and deposited in his own cathedral[46]. The license for the election of the successor to William de Kilkenny bears date 9th Nov. 1256[47]. It seems that the King had signified his desire to the prior and convent of Ely, that they should elect Henry de Wengham, chancellor of England, as their bishop; but notwithstanding the King's recommendation they chose

1258 Hen.III. Hugh Balsham or Belesale, sub-prior of Ely, who was elected 13th Nov. 1256; the King disapproving of the election, Boniface, archbishop of Canterbury, annulled it, and nominated Adam de Marisco to the vacant see; upon which Balsham appealed to the court of Rome, which decided in his favour 6th Oct. 1257; he was consecrated at Rome on the 14th of that month[48], and the King was induced to restore the temporalities to him 15th Jan. 1257–8[49]. He died 16th June 1286[50] at Dodington, and was buried in his own cathedral, before the high altar, on the 24th of that month. The next prelate of this see appears to have been

1286 14 Edw. I. JOHN DE KIRKEBY, archdeacon of Coventry and canon of Wells and York, though neither the congé d'élire which brought him there nor the royal assent to his election are recorded[51]; he appears however to have been elected 26th July 1286[52]; and presented to the King at Melun on Seine in France 7th Aug., and confirmed by the archbishop on the 17th of that month. He received the temporalities 7th Sept. following[53], and his consecration took place on the 22nd of that month[54] in Canterbury cathedral, and he was enthroned 24th Dec. following. He died 26th March 1290 at Ely, and was buried in his own cathedral[55]. The royal assent being given to his election on the 14th[59], his confirmation took place on the 27th, and the temporalities were restored to him on the 30th of the same month[60]. He was consecrated and enthroned at Ely 1st Oct. following[61]. He died 25th March 1298[62], and was buried in Ely cathedral. On 24th April the license issued to elect his successor[63], but the chapter were divided in their choice between John Saleman or Salmon, their prior, and John de Langton, chancellor of England[64]. The major part of the chapter elected the prior, and sent their certificate in his favour; but the King rejected it on account of informality[65], and assented to the election of the chancellor (19th July 1298), though

The chapter appealed to the Pope, and chancellor Langton attended his Holiness in person with letters of credence from the King[67], but the court of Rome, to appease both parties in the chapter, nullified both elections[68]; translated the bishop of Norwich to Ely[69]; made the prior bishop of Norwich, and bestowed the archdeaconry of Canterbury on Langton[70]; he allowed him also to hold any plurality of benefices[70*].

1300 27 Edw. I. Ralph Walpole, bishop of Norwich, having been translated to this see by bull dated 15th July 1299, the temporalities were restored to him 10th Oct. following[71], and he was consecrated 20th March 1299–1300. He died 20th March 1301–2, and was buried in his own cathedral 1st April 1302[72]. The license to elect a successor to Ralph Walpole[73] is not enrolled[74], but the sub-prior and convent of Ely, by their letter dated 25th April 1302, inform the King that they had elected Robert their prior as their bishop in the room license to elect a bishop in the room of John de Keton is dated ... June 1316[89], and

1316 10 Edw. II. JOHN DE HOTHUM, canon of York, provost of Queen's College, Oxford, was chosen. The royal assent to his election was given 20th June 1316[90], and the temporalities restored to him 20th July following, on which he also received the archbishop's confirmation[91], and he was consecrated 3rd Oct. He was made chancellor of England 11th June 1318[92]. He died at Somersham in the beginning of Jan. 1336–7[93], and was buried in his own cathedral[94]. The prior and convent of Ely, by letter dated 25th Feb. 1336–7, pray for a license to elect a bishop in the room of John de Hothum deceased[95]. The license was issued 3rd March[96], and

1337 11 Ed. III. SIMON MONTACUTE, bishop of Worcester, was translated[97] to this see by bull dated 14th March 1336–7[98]. He received the temporalities 11th June following[99], having done fealty to the king, and renounced all words in the papal bull prejudicial to the King's rights and prerogative[1]. He made his profession of obedience to the archbishop 31st July in that year. He

On the decease of the last named bishop, the license for the election of his successor issued 28th June 1345[4], and Alan de Walsingham, prior of Ely, was elected, but his election was set aside by pope Clement VI. in favour of

1345 19 Ed. III. THOMAS DE INSULA or DE LISLE[5], S.T.P., a friar preacher[6], who was consecrated at Avignon by Clement VI. in July 1345. He died in exile[9] at Avignon 23rd June 1361[10], and was buried there[11]. The license to elect a bishop in the stead of Thomas de Lisle bears date 24th July 1361[12]; but pope Innocent VI. commenced the translation of Reginald Brian, bishop of Worcester, to the see of Ely, but he died (10th Dec. 1361) before the translation could be perfected; and John Bokingham, afterwards bishop of Lincoln, was then elected by the monks, but was rejected by the Pope, and

1362 36 Ed. III. SIMON LANGHAM, abbot of Westminster[13], was promoted to this see by the Pope's bull dated 10th Jan. 1361–2. He received the spiritualities 26th Feb. following[14]; and 19th March he did his fealty to the king, and the

by the Pope to that of Ely[37]. The monks of Ely, however, were determined to choose for themselves, and elected Peter their prior as their bishop; but the archbishop of Canterbury refused to confirm their choice, and the prior appealed to the Pope, who annulled his election, and appointed

1426 4 Hen. VI. PHILIP MORGAN, bishop of Worcester, to the see of Ely, by bull dated 27th Feb. 1425–6[38]. He received the temporalities 22nd April 1426[39]; and afterwards, on the 26th of the same month, he made his profession of obedience to the archbishop[40], and received the spiritualities. He died at Bishop's Hatfield 25th Oct. 1435. His will, dated 21st Oct. 1435, was proved 10th Nov. following[41]. The license to elect a bishop, vice Philip Morgan, issued 30th Oct. 1435[42]; in pursuance of which Robert Fitz Hugh, bishop of London, was elected to the see of Ely, but he died 15th Jan. 1435–6[43], before his translation could be perfected. Upon this the King recommended Thomas Rodburn, bishop of St. David's, to the monks of Ely; but they would not accede to his Majesty's nomination, and elected Thomas Bourchier, bishop of Worcester, whose election the Pope confirmed; but the King refusing to restore the temporalities of the bishopric to him, he renounced his election. The Pope then appointed

1438 16 Hen. VI. LOUIS DE LUXEMBURGH[44], archbishop of Rouen, perpetual administrator of the see of Ely; and the King, having accepted the fealty of William Erard, the archbishop's proctor-general[45], ordered the temporali-

EXETER.

THE diocese of Exeter extends over the counties of Devon and Cornwall[1]; the inhabitants of which, immediately after their conversion to Christianity, were, with the whole southern part of the island beyond Kent to the extremity of Cornwall, placed under the jurisdiction of the bishop of the West Saxons, whose see was established at Dorchester, near Oxford; but upon Winchester being erected into an episcopal see about the year 660, all the western parts of England were assigned to the government of the bishop of that church, and continued under his charge until the year 705, when Devonshire and Cornwall were detached, and formed into the see of Sherborne, and so remained until archbishop Plegemund, about 909, by command of Edward, created three new sees; one at Wells in Somersetshire, another in Cornwall, and a third in Devonshire.

The diocese of Exeter contains four archdeaconries, viz. Exeter[2], Barnstaple, Totnes, and Cornwall[3]. The members of the cathedral body are the dean, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, subdean, the four archdeacons above mentioned, twenty-four prebendaries, and other minor officers.

[1] By an order, dated 30th July 1838, gazetted 24th Aug. 1838, the Scilly Islands were declared to be within the diocese of Exeter and archdeaconry of Cornwall.

[2] By an order in council, dated 11th Aug. 1842, and gazetted 23rd of the same month, the archdeaconries of Exeter and Cornwall were endowed.

[3] Another order in council, dated 11th Feb. 1848, gazetted 22nd of the same month, passed for newly arranging the limits of the archdeaconries of Exeter, Totness, and Barnstaple, and for abolishing peculiar and exempt jurisdiction in the said diocese.

BISHOPS OF CORNWALL.

The see of Cornwall was originally placed at St. Germans[4], and there remained until the reign of Cnut, when it was united with that of Crediton, and Cornwall and Devonshire placed under the jurisdiction of one bishop, who had his see at Exeter.

Aethelstan was the first bishop of Cornwall. His successors were

BISHOPS OF DEVONSHIRE.

The see of Devonshire was first established at Tawton, but it was soon removed to Crediton.

Eadulf I. was the first bishop of Devonshire, and consecrated about the year 909. He held his see at [4] It has been supposed that the see was originally at St. Petrock, Bodmin, hence the prelates were sometimes styled bishops of St. Petrock; but Whitaker has shown that the see was first established at St. Germans. See Whitaker's Ancient Cathedral of Cornwall, 4to. 2 vols. 1804.

Tawton, but died before he had sat two years. His successor was PUTTA, who is considered as the second bishop of Devonshire: he also held his see at Tawton. He was slain at Crediton, and for that reason the see was removed thither.

EADULF II was consecrated bishop of Devonshire, and installed at Crediton. He died in 931, and was buried at Crediton[7].

932 AETHELGAR succeeded Eadulf, according to Florence and Malmesbury, and died in 953. The first-named of these authors writes thus: "Aethelgarus Cridionensis præsul, vicesimo primo accepti episcopatus anno vitam in Christo finivit, ibidemque sepultus est; pro quo, Beati Dunstani abbatis consilio, vir venerandus, Alfwoldus functus est præsulatus officio[8]." Godwin, however, and Le Neve, who follows him, assign but 10 years to the episcopate of Aethelgar; and give as his successor ALGAR; who is, however, the same person as Aethelgar.

953 AELFWOLD[9], according to Florence, succeeded Aethelgar in 953, and was consecrated by the advice of abbot Dunstan. He died 13th Feb. 972[10], and was buried in Crediton[11]; and was succeeded by

972 SIDEMAN[12], abbot of St. Peter's, Exeter, who was consecrated in 972[13]. He died suddenly 30th April 977[14], while attending the council holden at Kyrtlington. He desired that his body should be buried at his episcopal seat at Crediton; but king Edward and archbishop Dunstan commanded that it should be de-

999 Aelfwold II succeeded Aelfric in 999[18].

Alfwold or Eadnoth[19] followed Aelfwold, but in what year does not appear.

1031 Lyfing, abbot of Tavistock, was the successor of Eadnoth[20]; and upon the death of Burwold, bishop of Cornwall, about the year 1040, that see was, at his solicitation, united with his own at Crediton. He had previously obtained the bishopric of Worcester, and held it conjointly with that of Devonshire during the remainder of his life. His death took place 23rd March 1046[21].

BISHOPS OF EXETER.

1046 Leofric, bishop of Devonshire and Cornwall, removed the see from Crediton to Exeter about the year 1050, where it has ever since continued. The year of his death is uncertain. In a missal given by him to the church of Exeter, now in the Bodleian Library, it is written that he died 10th Feb. 1071–2[22]; and in a chronicle of the church of Exeter his death is placed on the same day of the month, but two years afterwards[23].

[23] Anno 1073 die decimo Februarii obiit Leofricus primus hujus ecclesiæ episcopus. Chron. Brev. inter Reg. Eccl. Exon.

The first is apparently correct, i. e. 1072, according to the present style or computation.

1072 6 Will. I. Osbern succeeded Leofric in 1072[24]. The time of his death is uncertain; but the see seems to have been void some time.

1107 8 Hen. I. William Warlewast[25] or Warawast was consecrated 11th Aug. 1107[26]. He resigned on becoming blind, and retired to Plympton; but the year in which this took place and that in which he died[27] are not known. His successor was

1138 3 Steph. Robert Chichester, dean of Salisbury, elected in April 1138[28], and consecrated 18th Dec. in that year. He died 28th March 1155[29], and was succeeded by 1155 1 Hen. II. Robert Warlewast, also dean of Salisbury, and nephew of his predecessor William Warlewast. He was consecrated by Theobald, archbishop of Canterbury, 5th June 1155[30]. He died 22nd March 1159–60, and was buried at Plympton, near his uncle.

1161 8 Hen. II. Bartholomew of Exeter[31], dean of Chichester and archdeacon of Exeter[32], was consecrated in 1161 by Walter bishop of Rochester, the see of Canterbury [24] He was present, as bishop of Exeter, at the council of Windsor, held in 1072. Concil. Angl. tom. i. p. 325.

Flor. Wigorn. Contin.

[29] Matt. Westm., Annal. Winton., Chron. Petrob. Gervas. &c. all fix the year 1155 for the death of Robert and the consecration of his successor; but the Exeter Martyrology places his death in 1150, and also mistakingly calls him the nephew of bishop William Warlewast. The writer is therefore probably wrong in the date of his death.

being then vacant[32]. He died xviii Cal. Jan. (15th Dec.) 1184[33].

1185 JOHN, precentor of Exeter and subdean of Salisbury, hav-
31 Hen. II. ing been elected, was confirmed 4th Oct. 1185[34], and consecrated on the 6th of that month. He died 1st June 1191[35].

The see was vacant upwards of two years.

1194 HENRY MARSHALL[36], archdeacon of Stafford and dean
5 Ric. I. of York, was elected 10th Feb. 1193–4[37], and shortly after consecrated by Hubert archbishop of Canterbury. He died in 1206[38].

The see was vacant upwards of eight years.

On 24th July 1213 the members of the chapter of Exeter were commanded to go to the King with the utmost dispatch for the purpose of electing a bishop of the see[39].

1214 SIMON DE APULIA was consecrated iii Non. Oct. (5th buried in Exeter cathedral. On 25th Sept. 1223 the chapter of Exeter had license to elect a bishop[43]; in pursuance of which 1224 8 Hen. III. William Brewer[44], precentor of Exeter, received the royal assent to his election 25th Nov. 1223[45], and was consecrated at Rome by pope Honorius on Easter Sunday 14th April 1224[46]. He died 24th Oct. 1244, and was buried in his own cathedral[47]. The congé d'élire, vice the last-named bishop, is dated 20th Dec. 1244[48].

1245 29 H. III. Richard le Blund or White[49] (Blundus), chancellor of Exeter, succeeded William Brewer; the royal assent to his election was given 30th Jan. 1244–5[50], and he was consecrated at Reading 22nd Oct. (the Sunday after St. Luke's day) in the same year[51]. He died 30th Dec. 1257[52]. The dean and chapter of Exeter by their letter of 31st Dec. 1257 inform the King that their late bishop died on the day before the date of their epistle, and pray his Majesty to issue a license for the election of a new bishop[53]. The license accordingly issued 8th Jan. 1257–8[54], and the election fell on 1258 42 H. III. Walter Bronescomb, chancellor of Exeter and archdeacon of Surrey, who was chosen 25th Feb. 1257–8. He obtained the royal assent 2nd March following[55].

30th Nov. 1458 he obtained a license to be consecrated out of the church of Canterbury[32]. He was made chancellor of England 25th July 1460[33], and again in 1461[34]. On 15th March 1464–5 he was translated to York[35].

1465 5 Edw. IV. JOHN BOTHE or BOOTHE, archdeacon of Richmond, was provided to this see by the Pope, and 12th June 1465 he obtained the royal assent and the restitution of the temporalities[36]. On 2nd July following he had license to be consecrated[37], but the ceremony did not take place until the 23rd Feb. 1465–6. He died 5th April 1478 at Horsley in Surrey, where he was buried[38].

1478 18 Ed. IV. PETER COURTENAY, dean of Exeter, and archdeacon of Wilts, was promoted to this see by papal provision 5th Sept. 1478; the temporalities of which were restored to him 3rd Nov. following[39]. He was consecrated by license from the archbishop on the 8th of the same month in St. Stephen's chapel, Westminster[40], and 29th Jan. 1486–7 he was translated to Winchester[41].

GLOUCESTER.

THE diocese of Gloucester, until it was united with that of Bristol by an order in council dated 5th Oct. 1836,* contained all Gloucestershire, (except the chapelries of Iccomb[1] and "Cowhoneybourne," which were in Worcester diocese,) the deanery of Bristol, and the parish of Kingswood in Wiltshire. It had one archdeaconry, that of Gloucester, divided into the deaneries of Gloucester, Cirencester, Fairford, Hawkesbury, Dursley, Campden[2] cum Blockley, a peculiar; Stow, Stonehouse, Winchecombe, and the deanery of the Forest, which was taken out of the diocese of Hereford, when the see of Gloucester was erected by king Henry VIII; the archdeacon of Gloucester, however, had no jurisdiction in the deanery of the Forest, as the archdeacon of Hereford at that time would not give up his right; consequently, until the order in council above mentioned, he maintained his jurisdiction in part and, under the bishop of Gloucester, visited during one half of the year, and the bishop of Gloucester's chancellor during the other half[3].

* Other schemes for the union of the see of Bristol with that of Llandaff, or with that of Bath and Wells, had been before proposed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

[1] This parish, by an order in council 19th July 1837, was detached from the diocese of Worcester, and placed in the archdeaconry of Gloucester, in the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol. By this order the deaneries of Cricklade and Malmesbury were tranferred from the diocese of Salisbury to that of Gloucester and Bristol.

[2] The parish of Shenington, in the deanery of Campden, in the county of Gloucester, but locally situate between the counties of Warwick and Oxford, is by the before-mentioned order in council taken out of the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol and placed in that of Worcester, in the deanery of Kineton. The parish of Widford, in the diocese of Gloucester and archdeaconry of Gloucester, is transferred to the diocese of Oxford and archdeaconry of Oxford.

The see of Bristol being void by the promotion of Dr. Allen to Ely, it was united[4] to this diocese under the name of the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol; the bishop to be elected alternately by the dean and chapter of Bristol and the dean and chapter of Gloucester.

BISHOPS OF GLOUCESTER.

This bishopric was taken out of the see of Worcester in 1541. The charter[5] by which it was erected bears date 3rd Sept. 33 Hen. VIII. (1541), and is enrolled on the second part of the Patent Roll of that year, m. 10. It is printed in Rymer's Fœdera, vol. xiv. p. 724.

1541 33 H. VIII. JOHN WAKEMAN, last abbot of Tewkesbury, was appointed by the charter of erection the first bishop of this see, and the archbishop of Canterbury was informed thereof and desired to consecrate him 4th Sept. 1541[6]; he was consecrated at Croydon 25th Sept. 1541[7]. He died at Wormington[8], in the county of Gloucester, in the beginning of Dec. 1549, and was there buried. The spiritualities at his decease were taken into the hands of the archbishop 6th Dec.

[3] But by the order in council above mentioned, the deanery of the Forest was exempted and released from the jurisdiction of the archdeacon of Hereford, and placed under that of the archdeacon of Gloucester. By the same order in council the deaneries of Bristol, Cirencester, Fairford, and Hawkesbury, were detached and dissevered from the archdeaconry of Gloucester, and constituted and made an archdeaconry, called the archdeaconry of Bristol.

[4] Order dated 5th, gazetted 7th Oct. 1836.

[5] The charter of endowment and the statutes given by the founder to the church are in sir Robert Atkyns's History of Gloucestershire, folio.

[8] Ant. Wood concludes that bishop Wakeman died at Forthampton, Gloucestershire, where he had a house and a chapel. Godwin calls the place of his decease Worthington, meaning Wormington. There was a monument or cenotaph erected to him at Tewkesbury.

1549[9]. His will, dated 30th July 1549, was proved 16th Dec. following.

1550 4 Edw. VI. JOHN HOOPER was appointed by the King 3rd July 1550[10], pursuant to statute 1 Edw. VI. chap. 2., but he was not consecrated until 8th March 1550–51[10*]; the significavit to the archbishop was dated only the day before that event[11]; and on the 26th of the next month, by his charter of that date, he gave up and resigned his bishopric and see to the King[12], who, by the advice of his council, had determined to dissolve the bishopric of Gloucester, and to amalgamate it with that of Worcester, out of which it had been taken by king Henry the Eighth[13]; and his Majesty having deprived Nicholas Heath of the see of Worcester, conferred it on John Hooper, 20th May 1552[14], by the title of bishop of Worcester and Gloucester. Soon after the accession of queen Mary to the throne, she deprived all bishops of their sees who maintained a different faith to her own, and among them John Hooper[15], and reinstated those who had been ousted by her protestant brother. She also, 19th March 1553–4, issued her congé d'élire to the dean and chapter of Gloucester to elect a bishop to their see forthwith[16].

1554 1 Mar. I. JAMES BROKS, S.T.P., master of Balliol college, Oxford, was elected; he was consecrated in the church of St. Saviour, Southwark, 1st April 1554, and received the temporalities 8th May[17]. He died before 25th March 1558, and was buried in his own cathedral[18].

JOHN BOWSHER, as "episcopus nominatus," had, 25th Oct. 1558, the custody of the temporalities of this see, vacant by the death of James Broks, from 25th March 1558[19]. The death of queen Mary put an end to his promotion.

See vacant more than three years.

The congé d'élire was issued 27th Feb. 1561–2[20], and 1562 4 Eliz. Richard Cheyney, S.T.P., archdeacon of Hereford, had the royal assent 19th April 1562, and the temporalities were restored to him 2nd May[21]; he was consecrated at Lambeth 19th April 1562[22]. The bishopric of Bristol was also conferred upon him by letters patent dated 29th April 1562[23]. He died 25th April 1579, and was buried in Gloucester cathedral.

See vacant above two years.

1581 23 Eliz. John Bullingham, S.T.P., archdeacon of Huntingdon, was elected 15th Aug. 1581, confirmed 1st Sept., and consecrated at Croydon on the 3rd of the same month[24] to this see as well as that of Bristol. He resigned Bristol in 1589; and died at Kensington 20th May 1598, and was buried in Gloucester cathedral[25]. The license to elect on the death of bishop Bullingham is dated 2nd Aug. 1598[26].

1598 40 Eliz. Godfrey Goldsborough, S.T.P., archdeacon of Worcester and Salop, was elected 28th Aug. 1598, obtained the royal assent 4th Nov.[27], confirmed 11th Nov., and consecrated at Lambeth the next day[28]. He died 26th May 1604, and was buried in Gloucester cathedral[29]. His will is in the Prerogative Office of Canterbury[30].

1604 2 Jac. I. Thomas Ravis, S.T.P., dean of Christ Church, Oxford, was elected 17th Dec. 1604, confirmed 15th March, and consecrated 17th March 1604–5[30]; and in 1607[31] he was translated to London.

607 Jac. I. HENRY PARRY, S.T.P., dean of Chester, was elected 12th June 1607, confirmed 9th July, and consecrated 12th July 1607[32]; and in 1610 he was translated to Worcester.

611 Jac. I. GILES THOMPSON or TOMSON, S.T.P., dean of Windsor, was elected 15th March 1610–11, confirmed 8th June 1611, and consecrated at Lambeth the next day[33]. He died 14th June 1612[34]. His will, dated 12th Feb. 1605–6, was proved 7th July 1612[35].

612 Jac. I. MILES SMITH, S.T.P., was elected 15th July 1612, confirmed 19th Sept., and consecrated at Croydon the next day[36]. He died 20th Oct. 1624. His will bears date 7th March 1623–4, and was proved 6th Nov. 1624[37]. The congé d'élire, vice bishop Smith, is dated 15th Nov. 1624[38].

624 Jac. I. GODFREY GOODMAN, S.T.P., dean of Rochester, was elected 26th Nov. 1624, obtained the royal assent 12th Feb. 1624–5[39], and the temporalities were restored to him 21st March 1624–5[40]; he was confirmed 5th March, and consecrated at Lambeth the next day[41]. His bishopric was sequestered from him in 1640. He died a professed Roman catholic 19th Jan. 1655–6, and was buried in the parish church of St. Margaret, Westminster. HEREFORD.

THIS diocese contains the whole county of Hereford, except Ewyas Harrold, Walterstone, Dulas, Michaelchurch Eskley, St. Margaret's, Rollestone, Llandilo, Clodock cum Capellis Craswell, Longtown, and Llanwenno, which belong to St. David. It has also the better part of Shropshire, four parishes in the county of Monmouth, six churches and chapels in the county of Montgomery, eight in the county of Radnor, and twenty-one in the county of Worcester, all under the archdeaconries of Hereford[1] and Salop.

In the cathedral are a dean, two archdeacons, a precentor, chancellor, treasurer, and twenty-eight prebendaries, &c.

At the council of Hertford holden in the year 673 it was decreed that additional bishops should be instituted in Christian England, but especially in the province of Mercia, then embracing nearly one half of the country, and in which there was only one episcopal

[1] The deanery of the Forest, which was in the diocese of Gloucester, but not within the archdeaconry of Hereford, was severed from the said archdeaconry, and made part and parcel of the archdeaconry of Gloucester, by order in council dated 5th Oct. 1836; and the parts of the deanery of Irchinfield, which were situate in the county of Monmouth, except so much of that deanery as in no part of its boundary touched upon the existing boundary line of the diocese of Llandaff, were subtracted from the deanery of Irchinfield, and placed within the diocese of Llandaff, by order in council dated 31st Jan. 1844; and the deanery of Bridgnorth (locally situated between the dioceses of Hereford and Lichfield) was added to the diocese of Hereford and placed in the archdeaconry of Salop, by order in council 19th Dec. 1846. Twelve parishes in the county of Hereford, that had been originally in the diocese of St. David, were also annexed to the diocese of Hereford by order in council dated 15th May 1852.

see. Winfred, however, who presided over that diocese as bishop of Lichfield, was unwilling that it should be dismembered, and was consequently deposed for his contumacy by Theodore archbishop of Canterbury, who had determined that a bishopric should be erected at Hereford, which was accordingly effected in the year 676, and 676 PUTTA, bishop of Rochester, expelled from his see when Aedilred king of Mercia invaded Kent, was appointed the first bishop of Hereford[1]. He died in 688[2].

1079 ROBERT LOSINGA, called also ROBERT OF LORRAIN,
14 Will. I. was consecrated at Canterbury on Sunday 29th Dec. 1079[32]. He died 26th June 1095[33], and was buried in Hereford cathedral, which he commenced rebuilding.

1096 GERARD[34], nephew of Walkelin bishop of Winchester,
9 Will. II. was consecrated 15th June 1096[35], and was translated to York in 1100[36].

ROGER, clerk of the king's larder[37], was nominated by the king about Michaelmas 1102[38] to succeed Gerard, but he died eight days after his election and before his consecration[39].

1107 REYNELM, the queen's chancellor[40], had this see con-
8 Hen. I. ferred upon him by the king in 1103[41], and held it for a short time without consecration, and then resigned it into the king's hands[42] on account of the dispute between king Henry and archbishop Anselm relative to the right of investiture: but on their differences being arranged, Reynelm was consecrated on Sunday 11th Aug. 1107[43]. He died 28th Oct.[44] 1115, and was buried in Hereford cathedral.

1115 GEOFFREY DE CLIVA[45] was elected in the room of 16 Hen. I. Reynelm, and consecrated 26th Dec. 1115[46]. He died 2nd Feb. 1119[47], and was buried in Hereford cathedral.

May 1275, and was buried in his own cathedral[84]. The dean and chapter of Hereford pray the King, 16th May 1275, to issue a congé d'élire on the death of their late bishop John[85], and the royal license accordingly issued 23rd May[86], when 1275 3 Edw. I. THOMAS DE CANTILUPE, archdeacon of Stafford, was chosen by the chapter, who, 15th June 1275, presented him to the King[87]. The royal assent to his election was given on the 20th of the same month[88], and the archbishop of Canterbury by his letter dated 24th June informed his Majesty that he had confirmed his election[89], and the temporalities were restored to him 26th June[90]. He was consecrated at Canterbury 8th Sept. following[91]. He died at Monte Fiascone in Italy 25th Aug. 1282, and was buried in the abbey of Saint Severus near Florence, but his bones were brought to England and buried in his own cathedral[92], and his heart was deposited in the monastery of Ashridge in co. Bucks. He was canonized about 38 years after his death[93]. The custody of the bishopric was granted to Walter de Rudmerlegh 8th Oct. 1282[94]: but no congé d'élire, vice bishop Cantilupe, is enrolled.

[16] There is some confusion about the successor of Mountague in the deanery. Three MSS. notes in earl Powis's copy state that Oliver Lloyd, canon of Windsor, exchanged the canonry for the deanery of Hereford with Richard Mountague "per viam permutationis cum Olivero Lloyd, cessit decanatu prædicto [Hereford] et factus est archidiaconus Hereford, et instal. canon. [Windsor.] 6 Sept. 1617." If this statement be correct, Oliver Lloyd must have held the deanery but a few days, and resigned it to Griffiths, who thereupon resigned the archdeaconry of Hereford to Mountague.

Frederick Benjamin Twistleton, 17th Nov. 1825.

LICHFIELD[1].

THIS diocese contained, until the alterations made therein by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, the whole county of Stafford, except Broom and Clent, which belong to Worcester; all Derbyshire, the larger part of Warwickshire, and nearly half of Shropshire; divided under the archdeaconries of Coventry[2], Stafford, Derby, and Salop.

The chapter of Lichfield cathedral[3] consists of a dean, precentor, chancellor, and treasurer, who have prebends annexed to their dignities; and there are twenty-seven other prebends, one of which, Eccleshall, is annexed to the bishopric. Out of the holders of these thirty-one prebends, the dean and four more, chosen indifferently out of the prebendaries and dignitaries, are styled canons residentiary. The archdeacons, unless they are prebendaries, have no stalls in the cathedral.

There are twelve minor canons, five of whom are called priest-vicars; and the remaining seven lay-vicars or singing-men, &c.

[1] When this diocese was originally founded it was called the bishopric of Mercia: the name was afterwards changed to Lichfield, then to Chester, next to Coventry and Lichfield, and again to Lichfield by order in council 22nd Dec. 1836.

[2] The archdeaconry of Coventry was by the above order in council transferred from this diocese to that of Worcester. By an order in council 27th Aug. 1846 all peculiars in this diocese were abolished.

[3] Before the Reformation there was also a cathedral at Coventry where the bishops of the diocese formerly held their seat. After the dissolution of the priory of Coventry, the act of parliament 33 Hen. VIII. made the dean and chapter of Lichfield the sole chapter for the bishop.

BISHOPRIC OF MERCIA.

Peada king of Mercia having embraced Christianity at the instance of Oswi king of Northumbria, consented to receive a bishop to preside over his people: accordingly 656 Diuma, a Scottish priest, was ordained by Finan[4], between 15th Nov. 655 and Easter 656. He died in the year 658.

658 Ceollach or Cellach[5] was the second bishop of the Mercians[6]. Having resigned the see, he returned to his native country (Scotland) in the beginning of the year 659, and was succeeded by

659 Trumhere[7], abbot of Gilling[8]. He died in 662, and his successor was 663 Gearoman or Jarumann. He was sent into Essex in 664, and he died in 669[9].

LICHFIELD.

669 Ceadda or Chad[10], bishop of York[11], succeeded Gearoman in 669; and, with the consent of Wulfheri king of Mercia, established his see at Lichfield. He died 2nd March 672, and was buried in the cathedral at Lichfield[12], which was dedicated to his honour.

673 Winfred[13] or Wulfrid was ordained bishop of Lichfield in 673, and deposed in the following year by archbishop Theodore, on account of his refusing to sanction the appointment of additional bishops in the extensive province of Mercia[14], as decreed by the council of Hertford.

674 Seaxwulf[15], abbot of Peterborough, succeeded Winfred in the see of Lichfield, and gave a portion of his diocese for the foundation of an episcopal see at Hereford; and king Ecgbert having conquered Wulfheri king of Mercia in 675, subjected the province of Lindisse, then a part of the see of Lichfield, to his rule, and annexed it to the diocese of Wilfrith, bishop of the Northumbrians, who ordained Eathhed as bishop of Lindisse in 679, and appointed Sidnacester as his see. Eathhed was expelled in the same year by Aethilred of Mercia, who restored the province of Lindisse to the see of Lichfield; though only for a short time, for before a year had elapsed after its restoration, archbishop Theodore, at a synod assembled at Haethfield 17th Sept. 680, brought forward the decree of the council of Hertford for augmenting the number of bishops in Mercia; and, with the consent of king Aethilred, divided the diocese of Lichfield into four sees[16], and placed them at Lichfield, Leicester, Lindisse[17], and Worcester. The choice of these sees was given to Seaxwulf; he preferred Lichfield, because it was the place to which he had been originally ordained, and moreover had a more extensive jurisdiction; Cuthwine was placed at Leicester[18], Ethelwine at Lindisse, and Tetfrith at Worcester. Seaxwulf died about the year 691[19], and 691 Headdi succeeded to Lichfield[20] in 691, and died in 721.

721 Aldwini Wor[21] succeeded Headdi in the diocese of Lichfield, and also, like him, held that of Leicester during his life. He died in 737[22].

737 Witta[23] succeeded to Lichfield only[24] in 737, and from that time Lichfield remained distinct and in the same extent, until Chester was taken out of it.

752 Hemele[25], the successor of Witta, became bishop of Lichfield about the year 752. He died in 765[26].

765 Ceolfrith[27] or Cuthred became bishop of Lichfield in 765. He died about 768.

768 Burthun[28]. He died about 785[29].

785 Higbert[30] was nominated bishop of Lichfield in the synod of Celchyth, in which the jurisdiction of the archbishop of Canterbury was diminished, and a great portion assigned to Lichfield[31], as an archiepiscopate. Higbert, however, refused to assume such authority, and was content with his title of bishop[32]. He died in the year 786.

[20] Wilfrith, bishop of the Northumbrians, then exiled from his see, was under the protection of king Aethilred of Mercia, and took upon himself the government of the see of Leicester with Aethilred's consent; but Wilfrith being ejected by the sentence of the synod of Nestrefeld in 703, Headdi administered to Leicester conjointly with Lichfield.

786 Aldulf succeeded Higbert in the year 786, and was consecrated by Eanbald archbishop of York, assisted by bishops Tilberht of Hexham, and Hylbald of Lindisfarn[33]. He, at the request of king Offa of Mercia, and with the sanction of the court of Rome, exercised the jurisdiction of an archbishop. He received his pall from pope Adrian I., and the bishops of Hereford, Worcester, Leicester, Sidnacester, Elmham and Dunwich, were made his suffragans. In the year 803, at the council of Cloveshoe, called by command of pope Leo III., the archbishop of Canterbury was restored to the jurisdiction of which he had been deprived by pope Adrian; and Aldulf was present at the council, and subscribed to it as bishop of Lichfield[34]. The time of his death is not known[35], but his name appears as a witness to three or four charters in 814[36].

Humbert[37]. So Le Neve, following Godwin; but see note[37].

816 Herewin is said to have been consecrated by Wulfred, archbishop of Canterbury. He witnessed a charter in 816, and was present at a council held in 816[38].

[37] His name does not appear either in Malmesbury's list of the bishops of Lichfield or in that of Florence of Worcester; as Aldulf was alive in 814, and Herewin in office in 816, (Kemble's Codex, vol. ii. p. 264.) if there were a bishop of Lichfield so called at this period, he must have presided but a very short time. Matthew of Westminster under the year 795 incorrectly writes, Anno gratiæ 795 defuncto Humberto Lichefeldensi archiepiscopo, Higbertus successit.

[39] Omitted in the lists of Malmesbury and Florence of Worcester. The only authority for his name is Matt. Westminster ad annum 795, which is clearly an error.

818 Aethelwald[39] or Herkenwald[40] was consecrated in 818[41], and died in 828[42].

829 Humberht or Hunberht was consecrated by Wulfred, archbishop of Canterbury, shortly before his death; and he was slain with king Eadmund 20th Nov. 870[43].

[72] Gerv. Chron.

[73] I have been favoured with the following communication from the Rev. Robert W. Eyton, of Ryton:

The death of this bishop is placed by Thomas Chesterfield on 7th Dec. 1161, (Angl. Sacra, pars i. 434); a date confirmed by Wharton (Ibid.) in a note which quotes the obituaries of Canterbury and Salop as authorities. The English chronicles are generally silent on the subject of this prelate's decease; but the Annals of Burton, which ought to be a good authority (that house being within the diocese of Coventry), mention it, and date it as 1161. Sir H. Nicolas in his Synopsis, Willis, and Le Neve, each in his time, followed the date thus apparently authenticated. Nevertheless it is quite erroneous. N°. 287, in Madox's Formulare Anglicanum, (p. 177,) is a grant by this bishop. N°. 70 (in the same) is a confirmation by T. abp. Cant. of Walter Durdent's said grant, (Madox. Formul. Angl. p. 40); but this confirmation passed after the death of Walter, for it speaks of him as "bonæ memoriæ." N°. 80 (in the same) is king Henry II.'s confirmation of both the above, and is here quoted merely to prove that Abp. T. (of N°. 70) was Theobald, and not his successor Thomas. It follows that Walter Durdent predeceased Theobald archbishop of Canterbury. Now archbishop Theobald (though often and erroneously stated to have died in 1160) died, on the best authorities, in 1161, on 18th April. Therefore Walter Durdent died before 18th April 1161. The days given for the obits of bishops, &c., are generally taken to be correct, and therefore the day of Walter Durdent's death would (as far as the joint evidence given above can prove) be 7th Dec. 1160. But it may be doubted whether that date is not still erroneous, for, as will presently be shown, Walter Durdent died at Rome; and if on 7th Dec. in any year, the news would not probably reach England till February following. Then would follow the royal license to elect a new bishop, which in this case would be attended with some delay (as the King was in Normandy); then the royal assent (similarly a matter of some unavoidable delay);

1161 RICHARD PECHE, archdeacon of Coventry, and son of his
3 Hen. II. predecessor Robert Peche, was consecrated bishop of Lichfield and Coventry in 1161. He died 6th Oct. 1182[74].

1183 GERARD, surnamed PUELLA or LA PUCELLE, canon of 29 Hen. II. Salisbury[75], and clerk to Richard archbishop of Canterbury, was elected in Jan. 1182–3, and consecrated and yet it is certain that bishop Walter's successor Richard was consecrated by the bishop of Rochester in the presence of archbishop Theobald, (Gerv. 1381. Diceto, 532,) then in his last illness, and who was carried into his chapel to witness the ceremony. As therefore between 7th Dec. 1160 and 18th April 1161 there can hardly have been time for all these transactions, the next probable date for Walter Durdent's death is 7th Dec. 1159; which, as regards circumstantial evidence, is, as far as I have seen, unobjectionable. In other words, that is the nearest approach to the hitherto received date which circumstances will warrant. But in aid of circumstantial evidence comes that of the Norman Chronicle, which, calling him "Cistrensis episcopus," (Chron. Norm. 996,) places his death and that of Robert bishop of Exeter in 1158. I need not here enter into the proofs that the year of the Norman Chronicle at this period is a year too early; i. e. that the year printed in one part of the margin 1158 and in another 1185, is really the year 1159, and was so intended by the writer of the Chronicle. The Annals of Winton (Angl. Sacra, pars i. 300.) give the date of bishop Walter's death correctly, viz. 1159, but that of Robert of Exeter 1160.

I have lost the reference for my statement that Walter Durdent died at Rome. I have made a long search for it in every probable direction, and in vain. Possibly, therefore, my original note to that effect, made some years since, is a mistake, and that fact must be excluded. The probability that Walter Durdent predeceased the consecration of his successor by sixteen rather than four months, must be estimated therefore according to the ordinary delays which attended such successions at this period of history. I find no established case of so short a vacancy as four months, though probably Henry II.'s appetite for vacancies did not develope itself till after archbishop Theobald's death.

[74] Annal. Eccl. S. Werburgæ Cestrensis. (Angl. Sacra.) Hoveden, fol. 354 [b], asserts that he died in 1183. He is said to have taken the religious habit in the priory of St. Thomas, near Stafford, some time before his death.

25th Sept. 1183[75]. He died at Lichfield 13th Jan. 1183–4[76], under suspicious circumstances, and was buried at Coventry.

1188 34 Hen. II. HUGH DE NONANT[77], archdeacon of Oxford, and prior of the Carthusians, was elected in 1185, but was not consecrated before 31st Jan. 1187–8[78]. He died 27th April 1198 at Bec-herluin in Normandy, and was there buried[79].

1198 9 Ric. I. GEOFFREY DE MUSCHAMP, archdeacon of Cleaveland, was consecrated bishop of Lichfield and Coventry 21st June 1198. He died 6th Oct. 1208, and was buried at Lichfield. Upon the death of Geoffrey de Muschamp the monks of Coventry elected Josbert, their prior, as their bishop, and the canons of Lichfield chose Walter de Grey[80]. Neither one nor the other however was consecrated. Indeed Pandulph, the Pope's legate, declared both elections void, and after violent disagreements, the parties settled their differences by jointly electing 1214 16 Joh. WILLIAM DE CORNHULL, archdeacon of Huntingdon. He obtained the royal assent 6th Aug. 1214, and was consecrated 25th Jan. 1214–15[81]. He died xiii Cal. Sept. (20th Aug.) 1223[82].

[82] In the year 1662 there was discovered a body lying in a stone coffin under an arch westward of lord Basset's monument in Lichfield cathedral; on the breast of the body was fixed a leaden plate with this inscription: "Anno ab Incarnatione Domini MCCXXIII obiit Willielmus de Coventr. et Lichfeld. He died at Andover 26th Dec. 1238[86], and was buried at Lichfield. Upon the death of Alexander de Stavensby, William Raley or Rale, treasurer of Exeter, was elected in his room 24th Feb. 1238–9, but having been also chosen to the see of Norwich he went thither, and a new election was commenced: the canons of Lichfield chose their dean, William de Mancester, and the monks of Coventry fixed on Nicholas de Farnham[87], who however refused the dignity, even though urged to accept it by William de Mancester his opponent. Consequently a third election took place with the King's permission, and

1240 24 H. III. Hugh de Pateshull[88], treasurer of England and canon of St. Paul's, was unanimously chosen, and confirmed by the archbishop about Christmas 1239. Upon the death of Hugh Pateshull, the majority of the chapters of Lichfield and Coventry elected William of Montpelier[91], precentor of Coventry, in the room of the deceased bishop: but a certain number of the canons of Lichfield preferred Richard Crassus, abbot of Evesham, and keeper of the great seal of England; and as the King was favourable to the latter[92], the precentor resigned his election, and the abbot of Evesham was approved by the Pope, but died at La Reole in Gascony 8th Dec. 1242, before consecration[93]. They then re-elected William of Montpelier, who refused the office a second time on account of the King's objection to him, whereupon the Pope, rege penitus inconsulto, appointed

After ten years' constant sickness he resigned his bishopric at Brewood 4th Dec. 1256[96] in the presence of H. de Lexinton, bishop of Lincoln, who was deputed by the Pope to receive it[97], and the King assigned to him

14 According to some writers he died 9th Nov. He was suspended from his office by the Pope in 1301, on account of the grave charges brought against him by sir John de Lovetot; the King wrote to the court of Rome 24th Aug. 1302 (Fœd. N. E. vol. i. par. ii. pp. 943 and 956), shewing that the charges in question were false; and the Pope consequently restored him to his dignity by bull 6th June 1303 (Ibid. p. 956). 1322 15 Edw. II. Roger de Northburgh or Norbrige[16], archdeacon of Richmond, was appointed by the Pope, and had the temporalities restored to him 12th April 1322[17]. He was consecrated 27th June in that year, and made profession of obedience 31st Aug. following. He died 13th Dec. 1358[18], and was interred in Lichfield cathedral[19]. This prelate was appointed treasurer of the exchequer 2nd March 1328[20]. The license to elect a successor to Roger de Northburgh is not enrolled.

1360 34 Edw. III. Robert Stretton, LL.D., however succeeded; he was elected by the chapters of Lichfield and Coventry, and obtained the royal assent 1st Jan. 1358–9[21]. He made his profession of obedience 6th Feb.; but the temporalities were not restored to him until 19th Sept. 1360[22]. In the mean while, 22nd April 1360, he obtained the Pope's bull of provision, and his election was confirmed by the archbishop 26th Sept.; he was consecrated the next day[23]. He died 28th March 1385 at his manor of Heywood, and was buried at Lichfield. His will, dated 19th March 1384–5, was proved 10th April 1385[24]. A license to elect a successor to bishop Stretton issued 14th April 1385[25].

1386 9 Ric. II. WALTER SKIRLAWE, LL.D., archdeacon of the East Riding of York, was provided to this see by bull dated 28th June 1385[26], and made his profession of obedience at Otford 7th Jan. 1385–6, having received the temporalities[27] the day before[28]. He was consecrated on the 14th of that month[29]; but before his enthronization was translated to Bath and Wells[30], and thence to Durham.
